TABLE OF CONTENTS

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>INTRODUCTION</th>
<th>Acknowledgments</th>
<th>4</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Introduction</td>
<td>5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>A Day at the Office</td>
<td>6</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>BEHAVIORAL CHARACTERISTICS</td>
<td>Chemistry and The DISC Platinum Rule</td>
<td>10</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Characteristic Behaviors</td>
<td>11</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Summary: Open and Guarded Behaviors</td>
<td>12</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Openness in People You Know</td>
<td>13</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Summary: Direct and Indirect Behaviors</td>
<td>14</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Directness in People You Know</td>
<td>15</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>BEHAVIORAL STYLES</td>
<td>The Four Behavioral Styles</td>
<td>16</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Behavioral Summaries: The Dominant Style, The Influencing Style,</td>
<td>17</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>The Steady Style, The Conscientious Style</td>
<td>17</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>A Self-Portrait of My DISC Behavioral Style</td>
<td>21</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Summary of Styles</td>
<td>22</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Style Descriptors</td>
<td>23</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Both Sides of the Styles</td>
<td>24</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>HOW TO IDENTIFY THE STYLES</td>
<td>Identifying the Styles</td>
<td>25</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Observable Characteristics In The Four Styles</td>
<td>28</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>The Seminar</td>
<td>30</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>RELATIONSHIP COMPATIBILITY</td>
<td>Relationship Stress</td>
<td>32</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Behavior Under Stress</td>
<td>36</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Demystifying Compatibility</td>
<td>37</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>BEHAVIORAL ADAPTABILITY</td>
<td>Behavioral Adaptability</td>
<td>40</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>To Increase Behavioral Adaptability</td>
<td>41</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>General Strategies by Behavioral Type</td>
<td>42</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Action Plans</td>
<td>43</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Boardroom Vignette</td>
<td>44</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Mix and Match</td>
<td>45</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Prescriptions for Adaptability</td>
<td>47</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>LEADERSHIP</td>
<td>High Performance Leadership</td>
<td>48</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Managing by Style</td>
<td>50</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>TEAM BUILDING</td>
<td>Making Teams Work</td>
<td>51</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>SALES &amp; SERVICE</td>
<td>The Secret of Sales</td>
<td>53</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Selling by Style</td>
<td>55</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Providing Service with Style</td>
<td>56</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>CONCLUSION</td>
<td>The DISC Platinum Rule Action Plan</td>
<td>57</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Comparison with other “Styles” Concepts</td>
<td>58</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Answer Key</td>
<td>59</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Bibliography</td>
<td>60</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

This program is the result of the research and development of many people, beginning before the days of Hippocrates and continuing right up to the present. There are, however, some significant contributions that I would like to acknowledge.

I offer my thanks:

To Dr. David Merrill, Roger Reid and the Wilson Learning Corporation. I express my gratitude for first introducing me to the concept of personality types through their “Social Styles” programs.

To Jim Cathcart, who worked closely with me for over six years to develop the format, terminology, and core concepts of this program. We co-authored this program on audio cassette for the Nightingale-Conant Corporation in early 1985 under the title Relationship Strategies. It has since become one of their all-time bestselling programs.

To Dr. Michael O’Connor of Life Associates, Inc. I express my admiration for his depth of insight, and offer a big “Thank You” for his help in fine-tuning this material. Dr. O’Connor and I co-authored the book People Smart in 1990 that blended my Platinum Rule model of behavioral styles with the DISC model of the than Performax Company. Over the years, Michael and I co-authored additional books on the subject – The Platinum Rule, People Smart in Business and People Smart With Family and Friends.

Finally, thanks goes to William Moulton Marston, PhD for his seminal work in his 1928 book, Emotions of Normal People, and to John Geier and others for their work on the DISC assessment based on Marston’s 1928 work.
INTRODUCTION

Would you like to increase—substantially increase—your compatibility with other people? Can you imagine the ways this might benefit you in your career, your day-to-day dealings with people, and in your closest personal relationships?

Our characteristic Styles or patterns of relating to others determine the ease with which we build relationships. Most of our behavioral patterns are established early in life through the influence of peers, education, parents, authority figures, and our environment. Throughout our lives, a variety of behavioral patterns are reinforced and become habits. While our habits make us fairly predictable, everyone has different habits. That’s what keeps relationships interesting and challenging!

The DISC Platinum Rule assembles a number of simple tools that can easily be applied to improve both business and interpersonal relationships. This handbook is not intended to provide an in-depth psychological examination of human behavior; instead, it offers guidelines for understanding and adjusting to the differences in people, through observation of their behaviors. The tools presented here will enable you to see yourself and your world through someone else’s eyes and ears, and that can go a long way toward building compatibility!

The DISC Platinum Rule will show you how to “Do unto others the way they want and need you to do unto them” by teaching you to:

• UNDERSTAND that although each individual’s personality is as unique as his or her thumbprint, many behaviors can be positioned within a systematic, predictable framework.

• IDENTIFY how a person’s behavioral patterns influence what that person wants, needs, and expects from you and others, as well as how that person communicates those wants, needs, and expectations. People will actually tell you how to deal with them if you know what to listen and look for.

• ADAPT to people in a way that will reduce tension and increase cooperation and trust in all varieties of relationships.

It is my belief that people will show you—actually teach you—how they prefer to be treated if you will listen to what they have to say, watch what they do, and be willing to accommodate possible differences between their Styles and your own. It’s not hard! And the rewards in terms of productive, trusting relationships can be substantial in many areas of your life.
INTRODUCTION

“A Day at the Office” provides you with a method of evaluating your understanding of behavioral Styles and behavioral flexibility, the central concepts of The DISC Platinum Rule.

Your day at the office includes meetings with one prospect and one customer, lunch with a friend, and a planning session with a co-worker on an important new project.

DIRECTIONS:
Read the following four characterizations of the key personalities you encounter during your day. Following the characterizations are questions. Each question contains four statements. For each statement, select the character from your day who, in your judgment, best meets the condition described. Indicate your choice by writing one of the following in the blank before the statement:

“P” to indicate The Prospect
“C” to indicate The Customer
“CW” to indicate The Co-Worker
“F” to indicate The Friend

SAMPLE QUESTION:
In a team or group situation, it’s likely that others would perceive this person as:

C Decisive, efficient, goal-oriented
CW Creative, stimulating, quick
F Involved, agreeable, supportive
P Orderly, accurate, detail-oriented

THE PROSPECT

Your prospect’s office is neat and functional. Her desk is bare except for a laptop, a few reference books, a desk phone and a charger for her mobile phone. Her clothing is businesslike and conservative, yet feminine.

Her office walls bear charts, exhibits, and photographs pertaining to her job. The seating arrangement suggests formality and non-contact.

During the conversation, you get the impression that your prospect likes things compartmentalized, organized, precise, factual, and carefully planned. She wants to know the structure of your game plan and notes a number of times in the conversation that all players will be expected to follow the “rules.” She seems interested and skilled in problem solving, and looks forward to the process of gathering and sorting out the data regarding your organization’s services and processes.

You hear phrases like, “I’d like the facts—pro and con—the solid evidence about this application,” and “Let’s document these details in writing.” You’re impressed by her seemingly encyclopedic store of facts.

During your meeting, she inquires about the nitty-gritty details involving your personnel and your operating equipment: previous experience, credentials, detailed specifications, capacities, tolerances, maintenance, and security measures. You know she’s not about to rush into a decision; in fact, her last words to you emphasize her determination to carefully weigh the buying decision.

As she says goodbye, her handshake is formal, her eye contact intermittent, her manner proper. You get the feeling your prospect is a logical, cautious, well disciplined, steady, conscientious, efficient, independent person who takes pride in maintaining high personal and professional standards.

THE CUSTOMER

Your customer’s office is lean and impressive: decorated to express the power and prestige of the occupant. On one wall hangs an oil painting; on another, a large planning calendar. Floor-to-ceiling cases contain books, magazines, and reference volumes. Your customer stands up from behind a massive contemporary desk, grasps your hand firmly, and says, “How are you?” Without waiting for an answer, he adds, “Please sit down. I’ve got thirty minutes set aside for our meeting.” He fixes a steady, intense, expectant gaze on you as if to say, “Two of our thirty minutes are already gone, so let’s get down to the business at hand.”
As you talk with him, he asks questions about how your new product can lower costs, raise income, streamline production for optimal efficiency, and help achieve a quick return on investment. Obviously output-oriented, he expresses his goals in terms of achieving superior results in the shortest possible time frame.

His pace is fast, his manner straightforward and controlled. During your conversation, you hear phrases like, “Let’s cut through to the core of this issue,” “What’s the bottom line?” and “Where’s all this leading?”

You’re struck by your customer’s forceful, emphatic, impatient, decisive, serious style. At one point, when he disagrees with what you were saying, he leans back in his chair, crosses his arms, shakes his head, and says, “Wrong!” But even when he disagrees, he quickly grasps the content of your communication, and clearly explains his objections in a cool, businesslike, concise manner.

True to his word, he terminates the meeting exactly thirty minutes from the time you walked in. As you leave, he repeats that he’d like a written proposal containing details on dates, terms, prices, delivery, service, and all options, by the end of the week—all on one page. Everything about this customer challenges you and your resources.

“The Co-Worker

Your co-worker’s office is decorated in an open, friendly, airy manner. Her desk looks cluttered and disorganized. The chairs are placed in front of it, inviting openness and contact. Numerous award plaques and certificates grace the walls. If the office could speak, it would say, “Notice me.”

Your co-worker’s style of dress is fashionable, yet casual. Her handshake is firm and warm, her eye contact friendly, her smile broad and spontaneous. She touches your sleeve and motions for you to take a seat.

This is your first assignment with this individual. You ask her to tell you a little about her experience. Fifteen minutes later, you know her complete family, financial, and professional history. Her delivery is entertaining: lively, stimulating, upbeat. She laughs, gestures, and exaggerates a lot. Her manner is extremely persuasive, and you suspect she could easily sell you a thing or two.

As the project discussion progresses, you hear expressions like, “We’ll develop the specifics of the resource allocation plan later,” and “I just know this approach will win them over,” and “Rules are made to be broken.” Her pace is fast and lively. She sees sophisticated equipment as a means to impress the project team and provide status and recognition for both of you in the eyes of the company’s top management. She seems intrigued by new processes and systems, and would like to be the first in the company to try an exciting, state-of-the-art technology in an important project application.

Throughout the meeting, her energy, enthusiasm, and vitality never slow down. As she walks you to the door, laughing and joking, she urges you to help her make things start happening right away.

“The Friend

Your friend has selected a favorite, cozy restaurant. The walls hold autographed photographs of patron families (celebrating birthdays, anniversaries and weddings), baseball teams, and local clubs.

The head waiter knows your friend well. Upon your late arrival, he shows you to your comfortable table in the middle of the restaurant. “Sorry to be late,” you offer. “Don’t worry,” responds your friend. “I’ve just been writing a few letters. Are you having a tough day?”

Your friend surrenders to indecision over the menu selections, and asks you to order one more of whatever you were planning to have. As you launch into the gory details of your morning, you are reminded that your friend is a wonderful listener. As lunch arrives, the topic of your now lively discussion is travel plans to your upcoming twentieth high school reunion. High school holds fond memories for you both. It was where you first met. He was a varsity athlete and has been looking forward to reminiscing with the old team members and meeting their families. When the main course arrives, you both notice the meal could use warming, but he hesitates to say anything to the waiter: “I hate to trouble him. He’s so busy.”

You finish your meal well before your friend does. Before the check arrives, there is time to share your concerns about an upcoming project meeting. He continues to listen, quietly and supportively responding, placing more attention on you than the meal. He offers a number of helpful suggestions concerning “team building,” and how it might benefit your project. His lunch never does get finished. As you walk from the restaurant your friend remarks, “I’m so glad you could get away. Let’s do this again next week!”
1. Which of the day’s personalities would benefit most from each of these psychological environments?

_____ An outgoing, friendly, enthusiastic environment that gives recognition and approval to the person’s ideas and goals.

_____ An open, quiet, friendly, environment that demonstrates personal attention and an interest in cooperation.

_____ A businesslike, deliberately paced, detail-oriented environment that presents evidence and documentation.

_____ A businesslike, fast-paced, bottom-line atmosphere that reflects competence.

2. Which person would most appreciate each type of information from you?

_____ Results-oriented: Your qualifications and experience, the benefits of your products and services.

_____ Relationship-oriented: Are you trustworthy, non-threatening, cooperative, and friendly?

_____ Activity-oriented: Who else is using the system and what can it do for me personally?

_____ Process-oriented: What are the facts, are they well documented, and are you aware of the details involved?

3. Which person would probably dislike a business associate who tended to be:

_____ Impatient, autocratic, demanding

_____ Cool, impersonal, rigid

_____ Personal, indecisive, security conscious

_____ Spontaneous, unstructured, dramatic

4. During a problem-solving interaction, which person would appreciate each of the following types of support:

_____ Support that maximizes the chances for the “right” decision to be made: documentation.

_____ Support of their ideas, opinions, dreams, intuitions: enthusiasm.

_____ Support of their feelings and interests: interpersonal concerns.

_____ Support of their authority, eagerness, decisions: simplification and verification.

5. Which person is most likely to exhibit strength in the following areas?

_____ Motivation, Enthusiasm, Persuasion

_____ Systems, Organization, Planning

_____ Administration, Leadership, Decision-making

_____ Listening, Teamwork, Follow-through

6. If you were selling a product or service, to which person would each of the following be most important?

_____ How it works: What exactly does and doesn’t it do?

_____ Who else is using it: What personal benefits might accrue to the purchaser?

_____ Will it do the job: Does it need minimal supervision and maintenance?

_____ How will his people react to it? Is it safe?

7. Which person would need to practice each of these skills for his or her continued professional growth?

_____ Sensitivity to the feelings of others

_____ Self-discipline with regard to details

_____ Making timely decisions without all the data

_____ Facility in initiating action and taking risk
8. On the golf course, which person could you most see:

_____ Playing through groups of other golfers and betting on the outcome of the game?

_____ Spending more time in the clubhouse relating with people than on the course?

_____ Always golfing on the same day, at the same time, in the same place, with the same people?

Acting as “social director” with designer golf clothing, monogrammed golf bag, “top of the line” clubs, and personalized golf balls?

9. With regard to keeping appointments, which personality from your day is most likely to be:

_____ Punctual and very upset if you’re late?

_____ Late and won’t be concerned if you’re late?

_____ Punctual but won’t be angry if you’re late?

_____ Late but very upset if you’re late?

10. Which statement is most likely to be spoken by which person?

_____ “I have done some amazing things in my life, some of which actually happened!”

_____ “Everything in its place and a place for everything.”

_____ “I couldn’t wait for success, so I just went ahead without it!”

_____ “To get the full value of joy, you must have someone to share it with.”

11. With this person, focus on:

_____ The task/the results

_____ The relationship/the communication

_____ The task/the process

_____ The relationship/the interaction

12. At play with this person:

_____ Play by the rules

_____ Be spontaneous and playful

_____ Be casual and cooperative

_____ Be competitive and aggressive

13. With this person, create an environment that is:

_____ Enthusiastic

_____ Orderly

_____ Personal

_____ Businesslike

14. To facilitate this person’s decision-making, you provide:

_____ Testimonials and incentives

_____ Options with open analysis

_____ Data and documentation

_____ Personal service and assurance

15. With this person, you do it with:

_____ Conviction

_____ Warmth

_____ Accuracy

_____ Flair
CHEMISTRY AND THE DISC PLATINUM RULE

In our professional and social dealings with people, most of us experience personality conflicts from time to time. We may not be able to put our fingers on the cause, but something about the interaction is uncomfortable. Then too, there are those times when we first meet someone and after fifteen minutes feel as if we have known them for many years.

When we “click” like this with people, we often call it “chemistry,” or say that we get good “vibes” from that person. Our ability to develop and maintain chemistry with many different kinds of people is crucial to social and professional success.

Many people have been taught to help relationship chemistry along by practicing The Golden Rule: Do unto others as you would have them do unto you. When you interpret The Golden Rule literally, you are basing your actions on the assumption that others wish to be treated the same way as you like to be treated: That you should speak to people the way you like to be spoken to; manage people the way you would like to be managed; sell to others the way you would like to be sold.

Surprisingly, this assumption rarely holds true. In fact, if you dutifully follow The Golden Rule, the odds of effectively relating to others can be significantly against you.

Let’s take my mother as an example. My mother is the type of person who walks into a restaurant and, on the way to her table, stops to introduce herself to total strangers. She’ll approach seated diners and say, “Hi, I’m Margie Alessandra. What’s your name? Betty. Nice to meet you, Betty. Say, are you Italian? No? Too bad. What are you eating? Would you recommend it?”

She means well, but not everyone appreciates having a meal interrupted by someone they’ve never seen before. Other people think she is the greatest and wish their mothers were more like her.

The point: She imposes her way of doing things on other people. She doesn’t do this maliciously or selfishly. She actually believes people like to be treated the same way she does.

Experts in behavioral strategy suggest replacing The Golden Rule with The DISC Platinum Rule. This is simply: Do unto others as they would have you do unto them, or: Treat others as they wish to be treated.

We believe The DISC Platinum Rule expresses the intent of The Golden Rule and is far more useful in everyday situations that require interactions with many different kinds of people. And what day doesn’t?

---

THE GOLDEN RULE

Do unto others as you would have them do unto you.

THE DISC PLATINUM RULE

Do unto others as they would have you do unto them, or Treat others as they wish to be treated.
To practice The DISC Platinum Rule effectively, you need to be able to “read” people. Reading people involves observing their behavior, being aware of their tone of voice, and actively listening to their words. It requires that you tune into them. Find their wavelength and communicate with them on their channel, rather than expecting and waiting for them to communicate on yours. That creates chemistry!

The DISC Platinum Rule is based on the fact that human beings are often predictable; they develop habitual ways of dealing with other people in their environments.

The DISC Platinum Rule recognizes that people are different, that others may not wish to be treated the same way you do. Patterns that work for you may not work for them. In short, The DISC Platinum Rule allows for individual differences and preferences, and serves as a useful guide for many relationship situations.

The behavioral Styles you will learn in the following sections are based on personality theories that classify behavior patterns.

When a knowledge of behavioral Styles is combined with the application of The DISC Platinum Rule, you have an invaluable tool for creating better chemistry faster, more of the time, in more of your relationships. These are People Smarts.

When people act and react in social situations, they exhibit behaviors that help define their behavioral Styles. We can identify behavioral Styles by watching for the observable patterns in people’s behavior — those verbal, vocal, and visual traits that people display when relating to others.

Without some kind of classification system, you could observe and try to catalog thousands of behaviors in any single individual: a futile exercise. But identifying a person’s behavioral style is possible. You begin by classifying a person’s behavior on two dimensions: OPENNESS and DIRECTNESS.

The ways and degrees to which openness and directness are demonstrated vary from individual to individual. Someone may be high in one dimension and low in the other—or somewhere in-between. In other words, we all express some level of openness and some level of directness.

For our purposes in discussing The DISC Platinum Rule, we define each dimension as follows:

OPENNESS: The readiness and willingness with which a person outwardly shows emotions or feelings and develops interpersonal relationships.

DIRECTNESS: The amount of control and forcefulness a person attempts to exercise over situations or others’ thoughts and emotions.
SUMMARY OF OPEN AND GUARDED BEHAVIORS

Openness shows in the degree of self-disclosure: a person’s readiness and willingness to outwardly show thoughts and feelings and accept openness from others.

GUARDED BEHAVIORS

- Keeps feelings private: shares only on a “need-to-know” basis
- Makes most decisions based on evidence (objective)
- Focuses conversation on issues and tasks; stays on subject
- More formal and proper
- Goes with the agenda
- Fact- and task-oriented
- Takes time to get to know in business or unfamiliar social situations
- Disciplined about how their time is used by others
- Prefers to work independently
- Avoids/minimizes physical contact
- Tells, or enjoys listening to, goal-related stories and anecdotes
- Limited range of facial expressions during speaking and listening
- Shows less enthusiasm than the average person
- Formal handshake
- Less likely to give nonverbal feedback, if given at all
- Responsive to realities/actual experiences/facts

OPEN BEHAVIORS

- Self-disclosing
- Shows and shares feelings freely
- Makes most decisions based on feelings (subjective)
- Conversation includes digressions; strays from subject
- More relaxed and warm
- Goes with the flow
- Opinion- and feeling-oriented
- Easy to get to know in business or unfamiliar social situations
- Flexible about how their time is used by others
- Prefers to work with others
- Initiates/accepts physical contact
- Shares, or enjoys listening to, personal feelings, especially if positive
- Animated facial expressions during speaking and listening
- Shows more enthusiasm than the average person
- Friendly handshake
- More likely to give nonverbal feedback
- Responsive to dreams/visions/concepts
OPENNESS IN PEOPLE YOU KNOW

Now we will use your own relationships and experiences to practice classifying your observations of behavioral characteristics. Think about two people you know well. One should represent the “model” of open, and the other, the “model” of guarded behaviors.

In the space provided on this page, write a few descriptive words that represent their behaviors, their personality traits that ease your relationship with them, and those characteristics that can make your interaction with them challenging or difficult at times.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>AN OPEN PERSON YOU KNOW</th>
<th>A GUARDED PERSON YOU KNOW</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Name of person</td>
<td>Name of person</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Characteristics (descriptive words):</td>
<td>Characteristics (descriptive words):</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Behaviors that help your relationship:</td>
<td>Behaviors that help your relationship:</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Behaviors that hinder your relationship:</td>
<td>Behaviors that hinder your relationship:</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
SUMMARY OF DIRECT AND INDIRECT BEHAVIORS

Directness is the way one deals with information and situations. It is also the amount of control and forcefulness a person attempts to exercise over situations or other people’s thoughts and emotions.

INDIRECT BEHAVIORS

• Approaches risk, decision, or change slowly/cautiously
• Infrequent contributor to group conversations
• Infrequent use of gestures and voice intonation to emphasize points
• Often makes qualified statements: “According to my sources,” or “I think so.”
• Emphasizes points through explanations of the content of the message
• Questions tend to be for clarification/support/information
• Reserves expression of opinions
• More patient and cooperative
• Diplomatic
• When not in agreement (if it’s no big deal), most likely to go along
• Understated; reserved
• Initial eye contact is intermittent
• At social gathering, more likely to wait for others to introduce themselves
• Gentle handshake
• Tends to follow established rules and policies

DIRECT BEHAVIORS

• Approaches risk, decisions, or change quickly/spontaneously
• Frequent contributor to group conversations
• Frequently uses gestures and voice intonation to emphasize points
• Often makes emphatic statements: “This is so!” or “I’m positive!”
• Emphasizes points through confident vocal intonation and assertive body language
• Questions tend to be rhetorical, to emphasize points, or to challenge information
• Expresses opinions readily
• Less patient; competitive
• Confronting
• More likely to maintain his or her position when not in agreement (argue)
• Intense; assertive
• Initial eye contact is sustained
• More likely to introduce self to others at social gathering
• Firm handshake
• Tends to bend/break established rules and policies
DIRECTNESS IN PEOPLE YOU KNOW

Now, think about two people you know well. One should represent the “model” of directness, and the other, the “model” of indirectness.

In the space provided on this page, write a few descriptive words that represent their behaviors. Include their personality traits that both ease your relationship with them and that can make your interaction with them challenging or difficult.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>AN INDIRECT PERSON YOU KNOW</th>
<th>A DIRECT PERSON YOU KNOW</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Name of person</td>
<td>Name of person</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Characteristics (descriptive words):</td>
<td>Characteristics (descriptive words):</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Behaviors that help your relationship:</td>
<td>Behaviors that help your relationship:</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Behaviors that hinder your relationship:</td>
<td>Behaviors that hinder your relationship:</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
There is no “best” behavioral style. Each style has its own unique needs and wants, strengths and weaknesses. Much of a Style’s effectiveness in a particular situation depends on its “owner’s” ability to apply his strengths flexibly and compensate for his weaknesses in that particular situation.

Although behavioral style is only a partial description of personality, it is highly useful in describing how a person is perceived in social and business situations.

As you better understand why people behave the way they do, and come to understand your own patterns better, your communication will become more open and effective in ways that maintain comfort (reduce tension) and heighten productivity. With an awareness of the four basic Styles, you can learn to apply the spirit of the Golden Rule to create better chemistry more of the time and in more of your relationships.

As we have seen, each of the quadrants created by combining the openness and directness axes represents a unique combination of open or guarded and indirect or direct behaviors. Each combination has its own needs and preferences in terms of how an individual relates to people and situations.

The quadrants are used to represent four distinct, identifiable, predictable behavioral patterns or Styles. We will refer to these Styles throughout this workbook as the Dominant Style (D’s), the Influencing Style (I’s), the Steady Style (S’s) and the Conscientious Style (C’s).

The name given to each style reflects a generalized character type, rather than a complete or accurate description of any individual.

By now, you have probably identified with some of the characteristics of all four behavioral patterns. That’s natural! People possess traits from all four Styles to varying degrees. Yet most people display a dominant pattern. It’s like a theme in a musical composition: it does not describe all the parts, but it is a recurring and predictable element. Like variations on a theme, people also possess traits which vary from their dominant patterns. The most hard-driving, self-reliant Dominant Style will also have, if ever so subtly expressed, parts of the needing-to-be-part-of-the-team Steady Style.
Dominant Styles are guarded and direct. They exhibit firmness in their relationships with others, are oriented toward productivity and goals, and are concerned with bottom line results.

Dominant Styles accept challenges, take authority, and go headfirst into solving problems. They tend to exhibit great administrative and operational skills and work quickly and impressively by themselves. They tend to come on cool, independent, and competitive with others, especially in a business environment. Dominant Styles try to shape their environment to overcome obstacles en route to their accomplishments. They demand maximum freedom to manage themselves and others and use their leadership skills to become winners.

Closely allied to their positive traits are the negative ones of stubbornness, impatience, and toughness. Dominant Styles tend to take control of other people and can have a low tolerance for the feelings, attitudes, and inadequacies of co-workers and subordinates. They like to move at a fast pace and are impatient with delays. It is not unusual for a Dominant Style to call you and, without saying hello, launch right into the conversation, “You’ve got to be kidding; the shipment from Hong Kong will kill us... by the way, this is Jack.” When other people cannot keep up with their speed, they view them as incompetent.

The Dominant Style’s motto might be: “I want it done right and I want it done now” or “I want it done yesterday!” They get things done and make things happen. They are like jugglers who like to do many things at the same time. They start juggling three things at once and when they feel comfortable with those three things, they pick up a fourth. They keep adding more until the pressure builds to the point where they let everything drop, then immediately start the whole process over again. The Dominant Style’s theme seems to be, “Notice my accomplishments.” Their high-achievement motivation gives Dominant Styles a tendency toward workaholism.

The primary strengths of the Dominant Styles are their ability to get things done, their leadership, and their decision-making ability. Their weaknesses tend to be inflexibility, impatience, poor listening habits, and failure to take time to “smell the flowers.” In fact, they are so competitive that when they do finally go out to “smell the flowers,” they return and say to others, “I smelled twelve today. How many did you smell?”

A Dominant Style’s ideal occupation might be a hard-driving newspaper reporter, stockbroker, independent consultant, corporate CEO, drill sergeant, or monarch. In a business environment, they like others to be decisive, efficient, receptive, and intelligent. In a social environment, they want others to be quick, assertive, and witty.

A Dominant Style’s desk will be busy with paperwork, projects, and material separated into piles. Their offices are decorated to suggest power. Dominant Styles are formal and keep their distance physically and psychologically.

A Dominant Style’s office is arranged so that seating is formal; that is, face-to-face with a big power desk separating him from his visitors. They don’t appreciate people talking three inches from their noses, so becoming your friend is not a prerequisite to doing business with you.

To achieve more balance, Dominant Styles need to practice active listening, pace themselves to project a more relaxed image, and develop patience, humility, and sensitivity. They need to show a concern for others, use more caution, verbalize the reasons for their conclusions, and participate more as team players.
Influencing Styles have high directness and openness, exhibiting characteristics such as animation, intuitiveness, and liveliness. But they can also be viewed as manipulative, impetuous, and excitable when displaying behavior inappropriate to the situation.

Influencing Styles keep a fast pace. Their actions and decisions are spontaneous. They are seldom concerned about facts and details and try to avoid them as much as possible. Their motto is “Don’t confuse me with the facts.” This disregard for details sometimes prompts them to exaggerate and generalize facts and figures. It also gives them a built-in excuse when they are wrong: “I didn’t have all the facts!” They are more comfortable with “best guesstimates” than with exact, empirical data.

The Influencing Style’s primary strengths are their enthusiasm, persuasiveness, and delightful sociability. Their primary weaknesses are getting involved in too many things, impatience, and their short attention spans, which cause them to become bored easily.

Influencing Styles are “idea people.” They have the ability to get others caught up in their dreams because of their good persuasive skills. They influence others and shape their environment by bringing others into an alliance to accomplish results. They seek approval and recognition for their accomplishments and achievements. They have that dynamic ability to think quickly on their feet.

Influencing Styles are true entertainers. They love an audience and thrive on involvement with people. They tend to work quickly and enthusiastically with others. If they had a motto that would aptly describe their behavior, it might be: “Ain’t we got fun!”

Influencing Styles are stimulating, talkative, and gregarious. They tend to operate on intuition and like to take risks. Their greatest irritations are boring tasks, being alone, and not having access to a telephone.

Many Influencing Styles are in occupations such as sales, entertainment, public relations, professional hosts, trial attorneys, social directors on cruise ships, the hotel business, and other glamorous, high-profile careers. In the business environment, they like other people to be risk-takers and to act quickly. In a social environment they like others to be uninhibited, spontaneous and entertaining.

Influencing Styles design and use their space in a disorganized and cluttered manner; however, they know if something is missing. Their walls may contain awards, stimulating posters or notes, and motivational, personal slogans. The seating arrangement indicates warmth, openness, and a willingness to make contact. Since Influencing Styles are touchers and don’t mind a slap on the back or a warm handshake, they often move to an alternative seating arrangement when talking with visitors. There is little danger of alienating Influencing Styles by standing too close or playing with something on their desks.

To achieve more balance and behavioral flexibility, Influencing Styles need to: control their time and emotions; develop a more objective mind-set; spend more time checking, verifying, specifying and organizing; develop more of a task-focus; and take a more logical approach to projects and issues.
Steady Styles are open and indirect, relatively unassertive, warm, and reliable. Steady Styles are sometimes seen by others as compliant, soft-hearted, and acquiescent.

Steady Styles seek security. They take action and make decisions slowly. This pace stems from their desire to avoid risky or unknown situations. Before they take action or make a decision, they have to know how other people feel about their decision.

Steady Styles tend to be the most people-oriented of all the four Styles. Having close, friendly, personal, first-name relationships with others is one of their most important objectives. They dislike interpersonal conflict so much that they sometimes say what they think other people want to hear. They have natural counseling skills and are extremely supportive. Their theme is, “Notice how well-liked I am.”

Steady Styles tend to be good, active listeners and generally develop relationships with people who are also good listeners. As a result, Steady Styles have strong networks of people who are willing to be mutually supportive. You often feel good just being with a Steady Style.

Steady Styles focus on getting acquainted and building trust. They are irritated by pushy, aggressive behavior. They ask the question, “How will it affect my personal circumstances and the camaraderie of the group?” They are cooperative, steady workers and excellent team players.

The primary strengths of Steady Styles are relating to, caring for, and loving others. Their primary weaknesses are that they are somewhat unassertive, overly sensitive, and easily bullied.

Ideal occupations for the Steady Style cluster around the helping professions such as counseling, teaching, social work, the clergy, psychology, nursing, parenting and human resource development.

In the business environment, Steady Styles like others to be courteous, friendly and accepting of their share of the responsibility. In a social environment, they like others to be genuine and friendly.

Steady Style’s desks contain family pictures and other personal items. Their office walls have personal slogans, family or group photos, serene pictures, or mementos. Steady Styles are high-touch in a high-tech world. They give their offices a friendly, warm ambience and arrange seating in a side-by-side, cooperative way.

To achieve more balance and to develop behavioral flexibility, Steady Styles need to say “no” occasionally, attend to the completion of tasks without over-sensitivity to the feelings of others, be willing to reach beyond their comfort zone to set goals that require some stretch and risk, and delegate to others.
Conscientious Styles are both indirect and guarded. They are concerned with analytical processes and are persistent, systematic problem-solvers. They can also be seen as aloof, picky, and critical. Conscientious Styles are very security-conscious and have a high need to be right, leading them to an overreliance on data collection. In their quest for data, they tend to ask many questions about specifics. Their actions and decisions tend to be slow and extremely cautious, but they rarely miss a deadline. Although they are great problem-solvers, Conscientious Styles could be better decision-makers.

Conscientious Styles tend to be perfectionistic, serious, and orderly. They focus on the details and the process of work and become irritated by surprises and “glitches.” Their theme is, “Notice my efficiency,” and their emphasis is on compliance and working within existing guidelines to promote quality in products or service.

Conscientious Styles like organization and structure and dislike too much involvement with other people. They work slowly and precisely by themselves, are time-disciplined, and prefer an intellectual work environment. Conscientious Styles tend to be critical of their own performance. They tend to be skeptical and like to see things in writing.

The Conscientious Style’s primary strengths are their accuracy, dependability, independence, follow-through, and organization. Their primary weaknesses are their procrastination and conservative natures, which promote their tendency to be picky and over-cautious. Occupations that they tend to gravitate toward are accounting, engineering, computer programming, the hard sciences (chemistry, physics, math), systems analysis and architecture.

Conscientious Styles tend to be perfectionistic, serious, and orderly. They focus on the details and the process of work and become irritated by surprises and “glitches.” Their theme is, “Notice my efficiency,” and their emphasis is on compliance and working within existing guidelines to promote quality in products or service.

Conscientious Styles like organization and structure and dislike too much involvement with other people. They work slowly and precisely by themselves, are time-disciplined, and prefer an intellectual work environment. Conscientious Styles tend to be critical of their own performance. They tend to be skeptical and like to see things in writing.

The Conscientious Style’s primary strengths are their accuracy, dependability, independence, follow-through, and organization. Their primary weaknesses are their procrastination and conservative natures, which promote their tendency to be picky and over-cautious. Occupations that they tend to gravitate toward are accounting, engineering, computer programming, the hard sciences (chemistry, physics, math), systems analysis and architecture.

The greatest irritation for Conscientious Styles is disorganized, illogical people. In business environments, they want others to be credible, professional, and courteous. In social environments, they like others to be pleasant and sincere.

Environmental clues include highly organized desks with clear tops. Their office walls contain their favorite types of artwork: charts, graphs, exhibits, or pictures pertaining to the job. Conscientious Styles are non-contact people who prefer the formality of distance. This preference is reflected in the functional but uninviting arrangement of their desks and chairs. They are not fond of “huggers” and “touchers” and prefer a cool handshake or a brief phone call.

To improve their balance and behavioral flexibility, Conscientious Styles need to: openly show concern and appreciation of others; try shortcuts and time-savers occasionally, adjust more readily to change and disorganization, improve timely decision-making and initiation of new projects, compromise with the opposition, state unpopular decisions, and use policies more as guidelines than hard and fast laws.
A SELF-PORTRAIT OF MY DISC BEHAVIORAL STYLE

Directions: Use your understanding of your own personality to briefly respond to these questions.

1. My primary strength is:

2. My primary weakness is:

3. Famous people/television characters who have a style similar to mine are:
   Male:
   Female:

4. My personality is ideally suited for this occupation:

5. The automobile that best reflects my personality is a (make/model/color):

6. The song that best reflects my personality is:

7. What irritates me most about the way other people treat me is:

8. If other people want to get along better with me (my style), they should treat me:
SUMMARY OF STYLES

THE DOMINANT STYLE (D’s)
- Decisive actions and decisions
- Likes control
- Dislikes inaction
- Prefers maximum freedom when managing
- Cool, independent, and competitive
- Low tolerance for feelings, attitudes, and advice
- Works quickly and impressively alone
- Good administrative skills

THE CONSCIENTIOUS STYLE (C’s)
- Cautious actions and decisions
- Likes organization and structure
- Dislikes involvement
- Asks many questions about specific details
- Prefers objective, task-oriented, intellectual work environment
- Wants to be right, so can be overly reliant on data collection
- Works slowly and precisely alone
- Good problem-solving skills

THE STEADY STYLE (S’s)
- Slow at taking action and making decisions
- Likes close, personal relationships
- Dislikes interpersonal conflict
- Supports and “actively” listens to others
- Weak at goal-setting and self-direction
- Has excellent ability to gain support from others
- Works slowly and cohesively with others
- Seeks security and the need to belong
- Good counseling skills

THE INFLUENCING STYLE (I’s)
- Spontaneous actions and decisions
- Likes involvement
- Dislikes being alone
- Exaggerates and generalizes
- Tends to get caught up in their dreams
- Jumps from one activity to another
- Works quickly and excitedly with others
- Seeks esteem and acknowledgment
- Good persuasive skills
STYLE DESCRIPTORS

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>STRENGTHS</th>
<th>D’s</th>
<th>I’s</th>
<th>S’s</th>
<th>C’s</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Administration Leadership Juggling</td>
<td>Persuading Brainstorming Motivating</td>
<td>Listening Teamwork Follow-through</td>
<td>Planning Problem-Solving Systematizing</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>WEAKNESSES</td>
<td>Impatient Disorganized Careless Poor follow-through</td>
<td>Oversensitive Slow to begin action Poor at goal-setting</td>
<td>Perfectionist Critical Unresponsive</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>OCCUPATIONS</td>
<td>Top executive Sales Social worker</td>
<td>Engineer Accountant</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Military leader Performing artist Teacher</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>PACE</td>
<td>Fast/Decisive Fast/Spontaneous Slow/Relaxed</td>
<td>Slow/Systematic</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>MOTIVATOR</td>
<td>Winning The Chase Involvement</td>
<td>The Process</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>IRRITATIONS</td>
<td>Indecision Routine Perfectionism</td>
<td>Insensitivity Impatience Unpredictability Disorganization</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>UNDER STRESS</td>
<td>Dictatorial Superficial Submissive</td>
<td>Withdrawn</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>DECISIONS ARE</td>
<td>Decisive Spontaneous Consultative</td>
<td>Deliberate</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>SEEKS</td>
<td>Productivity Applause Acceptance</td>
<td>Precision</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>PRIORITY</td>
<td>Results Interaction Communication</td>
<td>The Process</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>WORKPLACE</td>
<td>Efficient Stimulating Personal</td>
<td>Functional</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Busy Cluttered Relaxed</td>
<td>Formal</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>APPEARANCE</td>
<td>Businesslike Stylish Casual</td>
<td>Conservative</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>GAINS SECURITY THOUGH</td>
<td>Control Others’ approval Friendships</td>
<td>Thoroughness</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Leadership Playfulness Cooperation</td>
<td>Preparation</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>FEARS</td>
<td>Being hustled Loss of prestige Sudden changes</td>
<td>Criticism</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
BOTH SIDES OF THE STYLES
Positive and Negative Characteristics

THE CONSCIENTIOUS STYLE (C’s)

Positive
- Diligent
- Persevering
- Creative

Negative
- Picky
- Righteous
- Stiff

THE DOMINANT STYLE (D’s)

Positive
- Firm
- Comprehensive
- Productive

Negative
- Uncompromising
- Overbearing
- Pressuring

THE STEADY STYLE (S’s)

Positive
- Supportive
- Reliable
- Pleasant

Negative
- Complying
- Retiring
- Pushover

THE INFLUENCING STYLE (I’s)

Positive
- Invigorating
- Optimistic
- Animated

Negative
- Excitable
- Impatient
- Manipulative
IDENTIFYING THE STYLES

You now have a basic understanding of the four types of behavioral Styles. You may begin to suspect at this point that relationships depend, in part, on our appropriate interaction with each style. The next question—the million dollar question—is, “How do I quickly identify someone’s behavioral style?”

“Excuse me, Mr. Jones, I need to analyze your style. Do you have a moment to discuss your openness and directness with me?” That just won’t do. Guesswork is not advisable, and rarely necessary because there are so many clues available, if you know how to look for them. To identify someone’s style, you must observe what that person does.

This simple procedure should help you quickly and accurately identify a person’s behavioral style:

1. Note the person’s ENVIRONMENT.
2. ANALYZE THE BEHAVIORS with respect to openness and directness to arrive at the likely BEHAVIORAL STYLE.
3. CONFIRM your observations.

STEP ONE: NOTE THE ENVIRONMENT

Note the environment in which your subject works, lives, or otherwise spends time. That may give you a number of immediate clues. How (if you should have the opportunity to see it) is the person’s office decorated and arranged? What is on the desk, walls, and bookshelves? What is the seating arrangement between you and this person?

The “Environmental Clues” chart on the next page summarizes a number of indicators that relate to the office environment. For instance, if you entered a client’s office and noticed family pictures on the desk and walls, nature posters with personal relationship motifs, a round desk, and a separate seating area with four comfortable chairs, what would be your first impression of that client’s behavioral style? If your client then stood to greet you personally and sat with you in the easy chairs in order to discuss the purpose of your visit, would that confirm or change your initial impression? By comparing these clues against those presented in the “Environmental Clues” chart, you can get a fairly good initial indication that (in this case) you are indeed dealing with a Steady Style.

Try another: This time you enter the office and notice on the walls: diploma, an achievement plaque, and a poster that says, “Why not?” On the desk: several jumbled stacks of papers in piles, a chaotic appearance. For seating: two overstuffed chairs and a small table close to the open side of the desk where two people can join in a discussion. You also notice a bookcase with books and stacks of folders intermixed and a plant on the file cabinet. Check the information in the “Environmental Clues” chart. From the environment, what kind of style does the person in that office appear to be? (The disorganization, wall decorations of achievements, stimulating personal comments that go beyond specific projects, and the comfortable and accessible seating mark this as the office of an Influencing Style. Get the idea?)

These environmental indicators are only one kind of clue to behavioral style. Caution: Do NOT use this as the sole determinant. The person may have had little control over the environment you see or may have changed the environment in order to meet other needs (e.g., an intense workload and a special visitor). Of course, many times your first contact with someone, and your first opportunity to get a feeling for their behavioral style, will not be a face-to-face encounter. It may be over the telephone, or through a letter or an e-mail.
ENVIROMENTAL CLUES

THE CONSCIENTIOUS STYLE (C’s)
- Desk may appear structured and organized with clear top
- Walls may contain charts, graphs, exhibits, or photos pertaining to job
- Decorated functionally for working
- Seating arrangement suggests formality and non-contact
- Desk between you and the individual

THE DOMINANT STYLE (D’s)
- Desk may appear busy: lots of work and material separated into piles
- Walls may contain achievement awards or large planning sheet/calendar
- Decorated to suggest power and control
- Seating arrangement is closed, formal, non-contact, and positioned for power
- Desk may be large to show success and to separate you from the individual

THE STEADY STYLE (S’s)
- Desk may contain family photos and personal items
- Walls may contain personal slogans, family or group pictures, serene art, or mementos
- Decorated in relaxed, airy, friendly, soothing manner
- Seating arrangement is open and informal
- No desk between you and the individual

THE INFLUENCER STYLE (I’s)
- Desk may look disorganized and cluttered, but they know if something’s missing
- Walls may contain awards, motivational slogans, stimulating posters, or “pat-on-the-back” notes
- Decorated in open, airy, friendly manner
- Seating arrangement indicates warmth, openness, contacts, and activity
- Likes contact: may move to alternate seating arrangement when talking to you

STEP TWO: OBSERVE BEHAVIORS

The second step, the crucial step, in identifying a person’s behavioral style is to observe it in action. Steps One and Three enhance and corroborate Step Two’s observations. In order to observe someone’s behavioral style, you need to be aware of and observe a range of verbal and nonverbal behaviors. This may require you to stimulate more behaviors by asking questions (probing) and by “actively” listening. You will find a number of good ideas and skills for probing and listening in the communication sections that follow.

We have assembled and classified a range of verbal, visual, and vocal characteristics into a list of observable behaviors (shown on the next page). These behaviors refer to actions you can see, not judgments you may be tempted to make about them. For example, if you were to see a person hopping up and down, is he doing so because he: is hop-stomping mad, just stepped on a nail, has a foot that’s asleep, or is extremely happy and excited? You can’t tell by looking. All you can say is he is jumping up and down. Remember – observable behaviors!
Using Verbal, Vocal, and Visual Indicators to Identify Openness and Directness

Guarded

Verbal (words)
- Tells stories/anecdotes
- Shares personal feelings
- Informal speech
- Expresses opinions readily

Vocal (tone of voice)
- Lots of inflection
- More pitch variation
- More variety in vocal quality

Visual (body language)
- Animated facial expressions
- Much hand/body movement
- Contact-oriented
- Dramatic actions

Open

Verbal (words)
- Fact- and task-oriented
- Limited sharing of personal feelings
- More formal speech

Vocal (tone of voice)
- Little inflection
- Few pitch variations
- Less variety in vocal qualities

Visual (body language)
- Controlled/limited hand and body movement
- Non-contact-oriented

Indirect

Verbal
- Asks (e.g., “Would you like to sit down?”)
- Listens
- Reserves opinions
- Low quantity of verbal communication

Vocal
- Steady, even delivery
- Less forceful
- Lower volume
- Slower speech patterns

Visual
- Gentle handshake
- Intermittent eye contact
- Limited gestures to emphasize points
- Exhibits patience

Direct

Verbal
- Tells (e.g., “Have a seat” or “Sit down”)
- Talks
- Expresses opinions readily
- Lots of verbal communication

Vocal
- More voice variety
- More forceful
- Higher volume
- Faster speech patterns

Visual
- Firm handshake
- Steady eye contact
- Gestures to emphasize points (e.g., pointing)
- Displays impatience
Observable Characteristics in the Four Styles

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th></th>
<th>Verbal (words)</th>
<th>Vocal (tone of voice)</th>
<th>Visual (body language)</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>The Dominant Style (D’s)</td>
<td>Tells more than asks</td>
<td>More vocal variety</td>
<td>Firm handshake</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Talks more than listens</td>
<td>More forceful tone</td>
<td>Steady eye contact</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Lots of verbal communication</td>
<td>Communicates readily</td>
<td>Gestures to emphasize points</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Makes emphatic statements</td>
<td>High volume, faster speech</td>
<td>Displays impatience</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Blunt and to the point</td>
<td>Challenging voice intonation</td>
<td>Fast-moving</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Conscientious Style (C’s)</td>
<td>Fact- and task-oriented</td>
<td>Little inflection</td>
<td>Few facial expressions</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Limited sharing of feelings</td>
<td>Few pitch variations</td>
<td>Non-contact-oriented</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>More formal and proper</td>
<td>Less variety in vocal quality</td>
<td>Few gestures</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Focused conversation</td>
<td>Steady, monotone delivery</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Influencing Style (I’s)</td>
<td>Tells stories, anecdotes</td>
<td>Lots of inflection</td>
<td>Animated facial expressions</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Shares personal feelings</td>
<td>More pitch variation</td>
<td>Much hand/body movement</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Informal speech</td>
<td>More variety in vocal quality</td>
<td>Contact oriented</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Expresses opinions readily</td>
<td>Dramatic</td>
<td>Spontaneous actions</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Flexible time perspective</td>
<td>High volume</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Digresses from conversation</td>
<td>Fast speech</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Steady Style (S’s)</td>
<td>Asks more than tells</td>
<td>Steady, warm delivery</td>
<td>Intermittent eye contact</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Listens more than talks</td>
<td>Less forceful tone</td>
<td>Gentle handshake</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Reserves opinions</td>
<td>Lower volume</td>
<td>Exhibits patience</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Less verbal communication</td>
<td>Slower volume</td>
<td>Slower moving</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

IDENTIFYING A PERSON’S BEHAVIORAL STYLE

To identify the person’s behavioral style using the openness and directness scales, first locate the person’s position on the openness dimension. It is easier to quickly classify open or guarded behaviors because they are more readily visible. Then determine the level of directness the person is demonstrating. The result is a placement of the person into one of the four behavioral style quadrants through a simple process of elimination.

For instance, if you determine that someone is exhibiting higher than average openness, you are automatically eliminating the Styles with guarded behavior – the D and C. Likewise, if you determine that the person is also quite direct, you automatically eliminate the remaining indirect style – the S. By the process of elimination, you conclude that this individual is probably an I—Influencing Style.

IF: The person being observed appears very Open...

THEN: Eliminate the Dominant Style (D) and the Conscientious Style (C) (the two Guarded Styles).

IF: The person being observed appears very Direct, rather than indirect...

THEN: Eliminate the Steady Style (S) (the more indirect of the two remaining Styles). The person is probably an I—Influencing Style.
A sales seminar I once conducted began at 8:30 a.m. after an 8:00 coffee and doughnut session. When I arrived at 7:45, the first participant was already in the room, pad and pencils neatly laid out in front of where she sat at the table. She said nothing until I approached, and we politely shook hands. She was totally noncommittal. I asked a few questions for which I received polite, short answers.

Around 8:15, with several other people in the room, a person stopped hesitantly at the door and softly asked, “Excuse me. Am I at the training seminar for salespeople?” When he was told “Yes,” the person breathed a sigh, walked in, took a cup of coffee, and mentioned how interesting the seminar would be – really helpful both in business and at home. He asked a few questions and listened intently to my remarks. He expressed some concern for role-playing in front of the group.

At this moment, another participant strode in, loudly asking, “Hey, is this the sales seminar?” Upon hearing “Yes,” this person dramatized fake relief and started asking where the coffee was, explaining that he couldn’t function without his “black poison.” He had overheard our role-playing comments and leaped in on the conversation to say how he liked doing those things. He followed this with a tale of how he embarrassed himself in the last role-play situation in which he participated.

What would you call the style of the first person described?

The second?

The third?

The first participant is clearly guarded. That means she is either a Dominant Style or a Conscientious Style. Her lack of interest in conversation and restrained gestures identify her as indirect as well—the classic Conscientious Style. The second participant volunteered information about personal feelings and gave rapid feedback with his sigh and his comments. These are relatively open characteristics (Steady Style or Influencing Style). The soft voice, request for clarification, and hesitation all suggest an indirect behavior pattern: this person shows a Steady Style.

The third participant demonstrated openness in telling stories and responding quickly. His directness was also apparent through his speed of responding, fast movements, and high quantity of conversation. These are traits of the Influencing Style.

STEP THREE: CONFIRMATION

After identifying the other person’s style based on environment and behavior, you should use behavioral confirmation to corroborate your choice. Behavioral confirmation simply means looking for additional behaviors that are characteristic of the style you believe (based on your preliminary observations) a person represents. You have observed someone and made a preliminary classification; now check this against the characteristics of the various Styles as you receive further information.

If you have determined that the individual is a Dominant Style, look for specific characteristics that you expect from a Dominant Style—competitiveness, impatience, efficiency, decisiveness, fact-orientation, goal concerns, and so on. If you find that the person exhibits these types of characteristics, you have verified your choice. You can now feel comfortable interacting with him/her as a Dominant Style. Use the same behavioral confirmation process with the other three Styles.

Always test and validate your initial style choice. The price for being wrong is much greater (if nothing else an embarrassment) than the time involved in confirming an initial assessment.
EXAMPLE 1
X is a businessman who exudes warmth even over the phone. He likes restaurant meetings and usually arrives early. When I met him for the first time, he immediately stood up and smiled. He called me by my first name, extended his hand to shake mine, and wrapped his left arm about my shoulders. He asked if I liked rum, then ordered a drink he was certain I’d like and related the story of his first encounter with the drink in New Orleans. The lunch lasted two and a half hours. Fifteen minutes of this time was spent on business, twenty minutes on new jokes, and the remaining time spent on X’s accomplishments and interests. During the lunch, he made friends with the manager and three waitresses, including the one who bumped into him as he was gesturing broadly.

EXAMPLE 2
When I called a vice president of training, she answered her own phone in a notably quiet voice. Upon hearing who recommended that I call, she spent a good minute talking about her friendship with the person. When I asked for an appointment, she said that her schedule was flexible. At our meeting, she greeted me by my first name in a warm voice. We sat in a comfortable seating area away from the desk. She brought in two coffees and we talked about the training program. She was most concerned about the training’s potential effect on the communications between management and employees. Though I felt that she had really listened, we had not made a great deal of progress in terms of identifying training needs. Nonetheless, we had developed a strong personal trust and parted our first meeting as friends.
You have been introduced to a generalized method of classifying a large number of behavioral characteristics into four basic behavioral Styles. Besides differences in openness and directness, the Styles tend to differ in preferences for pace (a person’s natural rate-of-speed) and priority (what a person sees as most important toward accomplishing a goal).

Each style has demonstrates their internal motivators through a combination of priority and pace. Open types place a priority on relationships, whereas Guarded people place the priority on tasks. Direct types demonstrate a desire for a faster pace through impatience, whereby Indirect people come across as more cooperative and patient. You can almost visualize an automobile dashboard with only two gauges: Speed and temperature! Direct people go fast; Indirect prefer a slower, steady speed. Open people are warm; Guarded are more cool.

A open behavioral style tends to correspond with a relationship priority; guarded Styles with task-orientation. Indirect behaviors tend to be slower-paced than the direct-style types, which tend to be faster-paced.

An awareness of behavioral-style preferences becomes especially important when people of different Styles meet. When that occurs, and if each person behaves according to the preferences of his or her own style, tension often results.

Pace and Priority

The “Tension Among the Styles” graphic on the next page relates pace and priority characteristics to behavioral Styles. Notice that the Steady Style and Conscientious Style both tend to prefer a slower pace; the Influencing Style and the Dominant Styles prefer a faster pace. These style combinations will get along well as far as pace is concerned, but watch out for their priorities!

Take the Dominant Style-Influencing Style relationship. Both the Dominant Styles and the Influencing Styles are relatively fast-paced behavioral types. Yet the Influencing Styles place more emphasis on personal relationships than on tasks, while the Dominant Styles tend to pursue tasks with less concern for relationships or feelings. Some degree of tension is likely to result during their interaction due to their differences in priority.

Where priorities are concerned, the Influencing Styles do better with the Steady Styles. These two will still be getting to know each other while the Conscientious Styles and the Dominant Styles are headlong into the task. However, without some awareness and accommodation for their differences in pace, tension may build as well in the Steady Style-Influencing Style interaction when these two finally do get around to the tasks at hand—the Influencing Styles usually want it yesterday whereas the Steady Styles want to take the slow and steady approach.

Consider the task-oriented team of Dominant Styles and Conscientious Styles, another example of pace-based tension. The fast-paced Dominant Styles like to make quick decisions. The slower-paced Conscientious Styles get uptight when having to make decisions without an opportunity to fully analyze all the alternatives.

When dissimilar pairings occur, as they often do in many business and social encounters, one or the other of the individuals must make adjustments in style to avoid increasing tension in the other person. This does not mean you must sacrifice your personality or become something you’re not. Ideally, both people would demonstrate some adaptability and move part of the way. Depending on the circumstances, however, only one of the individuals may recognize the potential problem, or be sufficiently motivated to do something about it.

When interactions join Styles that differ in both their pace and priority preferences, things really get interesting! Here the probability of relationship tension is even greater. This occurs in Steady Style-Dominant Style relationships, as well as Conscientious Style-Influencing Style relationships.
Take the case of the Dominant Style-Steady Style interaction: the Dominant Styles should try to show some concern for people rather than appearing to treat them only as a resource toward task accomplishment. The Steady Styles should try to show more concern for task completion, even if it means putting the personal relationships aside temporarily. When the Dominant Styles meet Steady Styles (a diagonal relationship), both individuals should attempt adjustments in both pace and priority. The same applies to the Influencing Style-Conscientious Style relationship. The key to managing tension is to know when to expect pace and priority problems, and have a strategy to prevent or deal with these differences in preference.
THE COMMITTEE

Imagine what would happen if you put together a committee consisting of a Dominant Style, an Influencing Style, a Steady Style and a Conscientious Style, and they all fervently practiced The Golden Rule. I can see it all now: As they enter the conference room for the first meeting and the door closes, the Dominant Style says, “All right, everybody, let’s get this act together! Here’s my plan.”

No sooner does the Dominant Style get the words out than the Influencing Style chimes in: “Who died and left you boss? We’ve got tons of time. Did you see what that manager was doing outside the room? It reminds me of a good joke I heard recently…” The Conscientious Style, who is patiently awaiting a turn in the conversation, says, “As I see it, there are three specific tasks we must accomplish in order to reach our ultimate objective. First …” The ever-patient Steady Style is likely the last one to speak, with, “Please, let’s not argue. Let’s try to get along and work as a team.”

Some people might think that the committee would be much better off if all four members were of the same behavioral style. But, the best committee that anyone could choose would be a combination of all four Styles, as described above. Each particular style has strengths that complement the weaknesses of the others.

They would make an excellent team if they would all practice The Spirit of the Golden Rule. They should focus on each other’s strengths rather than criticize each other’s weaknesses or differences. These differences in style actually bring new perspectives to problem-solving, creativity, and team-building that cannot be accomplished with a homogeneous group of Styles or a heterogeneous group of Styles that’s critical of each other’s style.

BREAKDOWN BEHAVIOR—A STORY

What happens to others when you do not practice The Spirit of the Golden Rule—when you do not adjust your behavior to meet the style needs, including the communication needs—of the other person? Two sides of the same story emphasize this very issue.

A salesman I knew complained of the narrow-mindedness and difficulty of a particular prospect he was trying to see. I didn’t tell him I had already heard the prospect’s side, but I could guess the problem.

The salesperson is an Influencing Style, complete with warm, open handshakes, first names and questions about his client’s personal interests. The prospect is clearly a Conscientious Style. I have already observed his quiet, somewhat remote, stone-faced, and fact-oriented behaviors. You can almost imagine the encounter these two had. As the salesman was involved in building a friendly relationship and dealing in general opinions and feelings, the prospect wanted to get down to business and was pressing for details. A communications nightmare!

As a result of the disastrous initial contact, the salesman thought the prospect was picky, aloof and uninterested in him or his product. The prospect thought the salesman was uncertain of his points, and intrusive in concerns that had no bearing on the business. The tension between the two was obvious, and both the prospect and the salesman had justifiable reasons for their lack of ease. Note that none of these reasons had anything to do with the product involved. Such an increase in tension generally results in distrust, low credibility and, eventually, an unproductive business or social relationship.
BACK-UP BEHAVIORS

Within each individual there is a point where tension increases until it results in stress. People in stress seek to reduce it any way possible, frequently by verbally or psychologically dumping it on the person “responsible” for the tension. Most dumping behaviors are unproductive, and can be destructive to the relationship at hand.

When tension increases, each behavioral style tends to manifest symptoms and respond to tension in ways (sometimes immature ways) that characterize that behavioral style. Each style has its own unproductive but characteristic manner of “dumping” stress on another.

The Steady Style who resorts to back-up behavior generally gives in or “submits.” The purpose is to avoid conflict at all cost. Although the Steady Style’s back-up behavior on the surface may appear to be a “go-along” attitude, it is not. Resentment builds due to the high tension level, and the subsequent interactions are likely to be filled with distrust and tension.

The Conscientious Styles back-up behavior takes the form of withdrawal from the other person or the situation. Being less assertive in nature, a Conscientious Style would rather flee from the unpleasant relationship than deal with it outright. Thus, the Conscientious Style typically seeks more and more information and wants to think it over as a means of avoiding the other person and the stressful situation.

Under stress, the Dominant Styles tends to become overbearing, pushy, uncompromising, and dictatorial. It’s an outgrowth of the Dominant Style. When the Dominant Styles is in back-up behavior, he or she tries to control anyone or anything that gets in his or her way.

As a rule, an Influencing Style (like the salesperson in our example) resorts to back-up behavior by verbally attacking the person who causes the stress. And if you have an Influencing Style on the attack, what tends to be your reaction? Most people react with increased tension of their own which, at some point, can push them into stress too. At this point, the relationship has all but ended.

THE GOOD NEWS

Fortunately, our understanding of behavioral Styles and communications lets us recognize back-up behavior for what it is. Rather than reacting to that behavior in ways that might make matters worse, we can respond to the behaviors with appropriate strategies that will reduce relationship tension before it has a chance to become significant stress.

If you are dealing with a style that moves fast, you move fast. If an individual is more comfortable taking time to get to know people, allow more time for the appointment and avoid looking at your watch. Move at his or her pace and priority, not yours. When you understand someone’s behavioral style needs, you can help create a climate of good chemistry and mutual trust. As the trust develops and strengthens, the other person—a co-worker, a client or a friend—will begin to tell you what he or she really needs from the relationship. There will be no contests or testing one another. The relationship will become more productive. As you develop better personal interaction, you will also feel more confident.

For our purposes, tension management involves meeting the behavioral needs of the people in a relationship—specifically those needs dictated by their behavioral Styles. In short, you must treat them the way they want to be treated; exercise The DISC Platinum Rule.
BEHAVIOR UNDER STRESS

When tension is high, each style tends to manifest symptoms of behavioral stress, often called “back-up” behavior. Often immature, this behavior results from a need to reduce tension immediately. In dealing with people under stress, you can reduce tension by providing what they most need.

THE CONSCIENTIOUS STYLE: WILL WITHDRAW

EXAMPLE of typical response to stressful situation:
“I can’t help you any further. Do what you want.”

MAY APPEAR
• Over-reliant on data and documentation
• Resistant to change
• Slow to act
• Slow to begin work
• Unable to meet deadlines
• Unimaginative
• Withdrawn
• Resentful

NEEDS
• Guarantees that they’re right
• Understanding of principles and details
• Slow pace for “processing” information
• Accuracy

THE DOMINANT STYLE: WILL DICTATE

EXAMPLE of typical response to stressful situation:
“If you can’t stand the heat, get out of the kitchen.”

MAY APPEAR
• Restless
• Critical
• Blunt
• Intrusive
• Uncooperative
• Irritable
• Aggressive
• Pushy

NEEDS
• Control of situation and self
• Tangible evidence of progress
• Fast pace for moving toward goals
• Accomplishments

THE STEADY STYLE: WILL SUBMIT

EXAMPLE of typical response to stressful situation:
“Okay, if that’s the way you must have it, we’ll try it.”

MAY APPEAR
• Wishy-Washy
• Submissive
• Passive
• Dependent
• Hesitant
• Defensive • Indecisive

NEEDS
• Reassurances that they’re liked
• Personal assurance
• Slow pace for comfort and security
• Relationships

THE INFLUENCING STYLE: WILL DISREGARD

EXAMPLE of typical response to stressful situation:
“Hey, let’s move on to something more positive!”

MAY APPEAR
• Manipulative
• Overeager
• Impulsive
• Inconsistent
• Superficial
• Unrealistic
• Wasteful of time

NEEDS
• To get credit
• Action and interaction
• Quick pace for stimulation and excitement
• Prestige
DEMYSTIFYING COMPATIBILITY

Compatibility, or lack of it, is not such a mystery. Both rapport and tension are rather predictable, once you know what to look for. Here’s the basic principle: In social situations, like behavioral Styles attract. People with similar interests and habits are drawn to one another as friends and acquaintances. There’s a sense of satisfaction in knowing you’re among people who prize what you prize, enjoy what you enjoy, play by roughly the same rules as you do.

If you’re a Steady Style or a Conscientious Style, you’re a more structured person who’s not fond of surprises. Thus, you find stable, predictable relationships more satisfying. Your needs are met by being around those who won’t embarrass you by, say, showing up in a magenta sport-coat or asking deeply personal questions upon first meeting you.

Or maybe you’re a faster-paced, more outgoing person, a Dominant Style or Influencing Style who thinks life’s too short to worry about whether your tires are properly inflated or your socks match your tie. Who the heck’s going to know or care a hundred years from now, right?

THE BIG TEN — AND HOW THEY PERFORM SOCIALLY

So what happens when these sometimes contradictory types get together? Well, the four basic behavioral Styles mix and match into ten combinations. Behavioral science research shows clearly which combinations—prior to use of The DISC Platinum Rule—mesh or clash naturally.

For starters, people with similar tendencies are most compatible with one another socially. That’s because those with common interests, habits, and approaches help reinforce each others’ self-esteem.

So it won’t surprise you to learn that the most naturally compatible combinations in social situations are:

• Conscientious-Conscientious
• Steady-Steady
• Influencing-Influencing

Where, you ask, are the Dominants? Well, they also tend to flock to one another—at least for awhile. But they possess such strong competitiveness that even the Dominant-Dominant relationship isn’t quite as naturally harmonious as the others.

That pairing does, however, show up under the moderately compatible category:

• Dominant-Dominant
• Steady-Conscientious
• Dominant-Influencing
• Influencing-Steady

Compatibility doesn’t come quite as naturally in these cases. But with effort, progress is possible and, in fact, success in working with less compatible individuals can be an esteem-builder in each case.

Dominant Styles and Influencing Styles share an outward focus and often similar interests. Steady Styles and Conscientious Styles, on the other hand, are both inward-oriented and may like the same kinds of activities.

Both Influencing Styles and Steady Styles aspire to be in a supportive relationship. Usually, though, it’s the Steady Style who’s in the giving role and the Influencing Style who’s the receiver.

Meanwhile, the fast-paced, extroverted Dominant Styles and Influencing Styles commonly find it hard to develop rapport with the easygoing, quieter Steady Styles and Conscientious Styles, who are less decisive and enthusiastic. And the Steady Styles and Conscientious Styles, in turn, find the Dominant Styles less desirable because they’re too pushy, too loud, and often demand too much of them.

Therefore, of all ten combinations, these three pairs are often the least naturally compatible socially:

• Dominant-Steady
• Influencing-Conscientious
• Dominant-Conscientious

To the Dominant Styles, who just wants to get things done, and to the Influencing Styles, who just wants to have fun, the cautious Conscientious Styles and steady Steady Styles can be drags. While Steady Styles often resign themselves... to tolerate the forwardness of Dominant Styles and Influencing Styles, the Conscientious Styles frequently just prefers to be alone.

What’s more, even when relaxing, the Conscientious Styles want to do all things right. Whether it’s just grilling hot dogs, chatting about politics, or setting up the croquet wickets, the Conscientious Styles set standards and judges themselves and others by how they meet them. The Conscientious Style, in the eyes of the Dominant Style or Influencing Styles, is not living as much as he is just serving time. By and large, never the twain shall meet—at least unless and until The DISC Platinum Rule is practiced.

On the positive side, though, there is a fascination factor in these three pairings, and bridges can be built. Given positive energy, the natural differences can fuel attraction, particularly when one style sees what it can learn from another. A Dominant Style, for example, may see how he can become more patient and responsive to others by taking a cue from a Steady Style. A Steady Style, meanwhile, may be able to draw on the Dominant Style’s strengths for taking charge and accepting risk.

Similarly, a sensitive Influencing Style can see how she can learn discretion from the Conscientious Style, and the Conscientious Style perceives that she can become more relaxed and sociable by being around the Influencing Style.

Perhaps the most difficult hurdles socially are posed by the Dominant-Conscientious relationship. For it to work, both must yield their personal control needs, with the Dominant Styles deciding to give the type of space the Conscientious Style needs, and the Conscientious Style learning to be much more direct and open about his concerns with the Dominant Style.

IT’S DIFFERENT TASK-WISE

When it comes to tasks—whether it’s doing a project at work, purchasing a family car, or just balancing the checkbook—the dynamics differ dramatically. Here, the “likes” who are drawn to one another socially don’t necessarily attract as much as they compete or even conflict.

Now their similarities can get in the way because they have the same needs. After all, to complete a task, one must have resources, rewards, time, space, and attention. But there’s only so much of those to go around.

So when those needs aren’t met, tension and conflict can result. When one partner feels a need to win, for instance, the other one may sense he or she has been shortchanged. The frequent outcome: resentment.

But, before getting into which pairs clash, let’s look at the most naturally compatible combinations task-wise:

- Conscientious-Steady
- Dominant-Steady
- Influencing-Steady

See a pattern here? You bet! The Steady Style gets along with everybody in a task situation. He or she’s the universal antidote for disharmony. It’s the Steady Styles most distinctive trait. They’re supportive workers who exert a calming, stabilizing influence. Naturally interested in others and in making a contribution, they enjoy being productive partners. No wonder they’re everybody’s favorite.

The moderately compatible combinations, as far as working on tasks together, are:

- Conscientious-Conscientious
- Steady-Steady
- Influencing-Conscientious

The Conscientious Style looms large in this second grouping. While not as easygoing as the Steady Style, they are sensitive to others’ feelings and have a passion for excellence that others usually recognize.

Interestingly, Conscientious Styles figure in many of the least compatible combinations socially, but among the highest in tasks. This suggests that others appreciate the quality and thoroughness of their work, even if the Conscientious Styles aren’t always viewed as being a lot of laughs.

Last come those combinations that are least compatible because they tend to see one another as competitors:

- Dominant-Dominant
- Dominant-Conscientious
- Dominant-Influencing
- Influencing-Influencing

The Dominant-Dominant combination works fairly well socially but when it comes to tasks, a Dominant Style’s competitive nature and need for control can stymie cooperation, especially with like-minded Dominant Styles.
As for the Dominant-Conscientious, there’s a fundamental clash in the Dominant Style’s need for speed and control versus the Conscientious Styles penchant for being slower-paced and systematic.

Notice that while the Influencing-Influencing pair was ranked as among the most socially compatible, they are likely to be the least productive as far as working together on tasks. That’s because neither is motivated to deal with task details.

Similarly, Dominant Styles and Influencing Styles also have moderately high social rapport but plummet to the lowest rungs of compatibility when tasks are involved. That’s because they both tend to want to delegate.

But don’t give up yet on those whose personal style may not be a perfect fit with the situation. With some effort at understanding and applying The DISC Platinum Rule, you can adapt your compatibility so that you can work successfully with anyone.
The willingness to exercise behaviors not necessarily characteristic of your own style, for the benefit of the relationship, is called behavioral adaptability. Behavioral adaptability is something applied more to yourself (to your patterns, attitudes, and habits) than to others. Behavioral adaptability involves making strategic adjustments to your methods of communicating and behaving, based on the particular needs of the relationship at a particular time.

No one style is naturally more adaptable than another. For a given situation, the strategic adjustments that each behavioral style needs to make will vary. The decision to employ specific techniques of behavioral adaptability is made on a case-by-case basis: you can choose to be adaptable with one person and unadaptable with others. You can choose to be quite adaptable with one person today and less adaptable with that same individual tomorrow. Behavioral adaptability concerns the way you manage your own communication and behaviors.

For example, when an Influencing Style meets with a Conscientious Style, one of the ways the Influencing Style can practice behavioral adaptability is by talking less, listening more, and focusing on the facts. Behavioral adaptability means adjusting your own behavior to make other people feel more at ease with you and the situation.

You practice adaptability each time you slow down somewhat for a Conscientious Style or a Steady Style; or when you move a bit faster for a Influencing Style or a Dominant Style. It occurs when the Dominant Style or the Conscientious Style takes the time to listen to a human interest or family story told by an Influencing Style or a Steady Style.

Adaptability does not mean “imitation” of the other person’s behavioral style. It does mean adjusting your openness, directness, pace, and priority in the direction of the other person’s preference while maintaining your own identity and good business sense.

Adaptability is important to successful relationships of all kinds. People often adopt a different style in their professional lives than they do in their social and personal lives. It is interesting that we tend to be more adaptable at work with people we know less and we tend to be less adaptable at home with people we know better.

Of course, adaptability at its extreme could make you appear wishy-washy and two-faced. Maintaining high adaptability in all situations may create stress and inefficiency for you. There is also the danger of developing tension from the stress of behaving in a “foreign” style. Usually, this is temporary and may in fact be worth it if you gain rapport with the other person. At the other end of the continuum, no behavioral adaptability would cause others to view you as rigid and uncompromising because you are insisting on behaving according to your own natural pace and priority.

The effectively adaptable person meets the other person’s needs and his own. Through attention and practice, he is able to achieve a balance: strategically managing his adaptability by recognizing when a modest compromise is appropriate, or, when the nature of the situation calls for it, totally adapting to the other person’s behavioral style. He knows how to negotiate relationships in a way that allows everyone to win. He is tactful, reasonable, understanding, and non-judgmental.

Your adaptability level influences how others judge their relationship with you. Raise your adaptability level—trust and credibility go up; lower your adaptability level—trust and credibility go down. Adaptability enables you to interact more productively with difficult people and helps you to avoid or manage tense situations. With adaptability you are practicing The DISC Platinum Rule, and can treat the other person the way he wants to be treated.

For more information, including tips on how to become more adaptable, you may be interested in Maximizing Your Adaptability. This eReport is the ultimate guide to adjusting your behavior Styles so that you can get along with absolutely anyone. To purchase Maximizing Your Adaptability, please visit my online store: http://www.alessandra.com/products/productdetails.asp?productid=31
TO INCREASE BEHAVIORAL ADAPTABILITY:

THE CONSCIENTIOUS STYLE (C’S) NEEDS TO...

• Openly show concern and appreciation of others
• Occasionally try short cuts and timesavers
• Adjust more readily to change and disorganization
• Work on timely decision-making
• Initiate new projects
• Compromise with the opposition
• Use policies as guidelines, rather than laws

THE DOMINANT STYLE (D’S) NEEDS TO...

• Practice “active” listening
• Project a more relaxed image by pacing themselves
• Develop patience, humility, sensitivity, and empathy
• Use more caution
• Verbalize the reasons for conclusions
• Identify with a group
• Be aware of existing sanctions
• Verbalize compliments to others

THE INFLUENCING STYLE (I’S) NEEDS TO...

• Control time and emotions
• Develop a more objective mindset
• Spend more time checking, verifying, specifying, and organizing
• Follow through on agreements
• Concentrate on the task at hand
• Take a more logical approach
• Try to complete more of what they start

THE STEADY STYLE (S’S) NEEDS TO...

• Say “No” occasionally
• Attend to completion of tasks without over-sensitivity to others’ feelings
• Take risks by stretching beyond their comfort zone
• Delegate to others
• Accept necessary changes in procedure or routine
• Verbalize their feelings and thoughts to the appropriate people
GENERAL STRATEGIES
BY BEHAVIORAL TYPE

In Relationships With C’s:
- Support their organized, thoughtful approach
- Demonstrate through actions rather than words
- Be systematic, exact, organized, and prepared
- List advantages and disadvantages of any plan
- Provide solid, tangible, factual evidence
- Provide guarantees that actions can’t backfire

ABOVE ALL BE: Thorough and well prepared.

In Relationships With D’s:
- Support their goals and objectives
- Keep your relationship businesslike
- If you disagree, argue facts – not personal feelings
- Recognize their ideas – not them personally
- To influence decisions, provide alternative actions with brief supporting analysis
- Be precise, efficient, and well organized

ABOVE ALL BE: Efficient and competent.

In Relationships With S’s:
- Support their feelings by showing personal interest
- When you disagree, discuss personal feelings
- Allow them time to trust you
- Move along in an informal, slow manner
- Provide guarantees and personal assurances that any actions will involve minimum risk

ABOVE ALL BE: Warm and sincere.

In Relationships With I’s:
- Support their opinions, ideas, and dreams
- Don’t hurry the discussion
- Try not to argue – you usually won’t win
- Agree on the specifics and put everything in writing
- Be entertaining and fast moving
- Use testimonials and incentives to positively affect decisions

ABOVE ALL BE: Interested in them.
Action Plans . . .

Steady Characteristics

They are...
- Concerned with stability
- Think logically
- Want documentation and facts
- Like personal involvement
- Need to know in a step-by-step sequence
- Avoid conflict
- Need to be right
- Like to contemplate

So you...
- Approach them in an indirect, non-threatening way
- Show your reasoning
- Provide data/ proof
- Let them assess and be involved in the process when possible
- Tactfully ask for clarification and assistance that you may need
- Allow them time to find the best or “correct” answer, within available limits
- Tell them “why” and “how”

Conscientious Characteristics

They are...
- Concerned with aggressive approaches
- Think logically
- Seek data
- Need to know the process
- Utilize caution
- Prefer to do things themselves
- Want others to notice their accuracy
- Gravitate toward quality control
- Avoid conflict
- Need to be right
- Like to contemplate

So you...
- Approach them in an indirect, non-threatening way
- Show your reasoning
- Give it to them in writing
- Provide explanations and rationale
- Allow them to think, inquire, and check before they make decisions
- When delegating, let them check on others’ progress and performance
- Compliment them on their thoroughness and correctness when appropriate
- Let them assess and be involved in the process when possible
- Tactfully ask for clarification and assistance that you may need
- Allow them time to find the best or “correct” answer, within available limits
- Tell them “why” and “how”

Dominant Characteristics

They are...
- Concerned with being #1
- Think logically
- Want facts and highlights
- Strive for results
- Like personal choices
- Like changes
- Prefer to delegate
- Want others to notice their accomplishments
- Need to be in charge
- Tendency towards conflict

So you...
- Show them how to win, and new opportunities
- Display reasoning
- Provide concise data
- Agree on goal and boundaries, then support them or get out of their way
- Allow them to “do their thing,” within limits
- Vary routine
- Look for opportunities to modify their work load focus
- Compliment them on what they’ve done
- Let them take the lead, when appropriate, but give them parameters
- If necessary, argue with conviction on points of disagreement, backed up with facts; don’t argue on “personality” basis

Influencing Characteristics

They are...
- Concerned with approval and appearances
- Seek enthusiastic people and situations
- Think emotionally
- Want to know the general expectations
- Need involvement and people contact
- Like changes and innovations
- Want others to notice them
- Often need help getting organized
- Dislike conflict
- Look for action and stimulation
- Surround themselves with optimism
- Want feedback that they “look good”

So you...
- Behave optimistically and provide an upbeat setting
- Support their feelings when possible
- Avoid involved details, focus on the “big picture”
- Interact and participate with them
- Vary the routine; avoid requiring long-term repetition by them
- Compliment them personally and often
- Do it together
- Act non-aggressively and avoid arguing directly on a personal basis
- Keep up a fast, lively pace
- Support their ideas and don’t poke holes in their dreams; show them your positive side
- Mention their accomplishments, progress, and your other genuine appreciation
BOARDDROOM VIGNETTE

Tom: Okay everybody, we’ve got a big problem that requires immediate attention. According to the memos we received this morning, one of our top five clients has a customer service gripe and we need to fix it ASAP. Now here’s my plan...

Judy: Wait a second. Who died and left you boss? I’ve got to tell you, my gut feeling on this whole thing is that it’s not a big deal. One of their people is just trying to make a mountain out of a molehill. Two weeks ago, I had lunch with Jerry Stiller and he gave me absolutely no indication that they were unhappy. In fact, we had a great lunch and he said they were looking forward to a terrific year with us. Look, I’ll call Jerry and a few other people, take ‘em to dinner, and schmooze a bit. You’ll see, this whole thing will blow over in no time at all.

John: I’m not sure about that. You have to be careful here in case there’s more to this than meets the eye. Obviously some things have gotten out of control here. The most hassle-free way to solve this might be to clearly identify where the service breakdown occurred. We could conduct a survey of our client’s employees, analyze the data, then pinpoint precisely where the problem is. Implement a recovery program with some tight controls, then follow up with another survey to make sure we achieved our goals. That’s the only way we’ll be able to offer them some solid guarantees that the problem or problems have been solved and aren’t likely to happen again.

Mary: A survey? We don’t have time for a survey. This thing has got to be nipped in the bud right now. I have a bonus riding on this account. In fact, we all have bonuses riding on this account. Look, you guys find out what went wrong and come up with a bottom line solution, one that takes into consideration the costs and the benefits of the remedy. Then I’ll carry the ball into a conference call with their top guy and straighten this thing out, but I need to be able to make that call in a couple of days. So let’s get moving, right now.

Liz: This doesn’t seem to be just a financial situation. We let a lot of people down on their side and ours. We created expectations and didn’t live up to them. We caused a moment of misery for our clients. We could meet with their people one-on-one and prove to them that our commitment to this relationship is as strong as ever. We’ve got to pull together now and work as a team. It may be a lot of work, but that’s okay. I for one will volunteer to put in the extra time needed if that’s what it takes to make things right.

Paul: Maybe we’re just not showing enough appreciation for their business. Here’s what we do. We take some of their people out for a fishing trip, maybe throw ‘em a big party. I’m gonna tell you, you’d be amazed how fast things like this can blow over with a little positive attitude adjustment.

Judy: That works for me. I know a great reggae band.

Tom: Umph. You people are hopeless.

---

Exercise

Using the above dialogue, which style would you attribute to each person?

- Tom: ______________________
- Judy: ______________________
- John: ______________________
- Mary: ______________________
- Liz: ______________________
- Paul: ______________________

[Answers on Page 59]
MIX AND MATCH

The purpose of this activity is to talk with as many people as possible within a 15-minute period and gather as many clues as you can in order to determine their Styles.

Directions:

1. Quickly review the categories listed below.

2. Circulate—meet people—talk with them and find out about them; see if they can fit any of the categories below.

3. When you find a match during your conversation, have that person sign the category on your sheet and then move on to another person to talk with.

4. Do not use any signature for more than one category.

MEET SOMEONE WHO:

1. _______ has blond or red hair and shake that person’s hand.
   Person’s signature: ____________________________

2. _______ can touch their toes without bending at the knee.
   Person’s signature: ____________________________

3. _______ visited a very unusual vacation spot within the last year.
   Person’s signature: ____________________________

4. _______ is wearing a shoe size less that size seven.
   Person’s signature: ____________________________

5. _______ is wearing a shoe size greater than size twelve.
   Person’s signature: ____________________________

6. _______ plays a stringed instrument.
   Person’s signature: ____________________________

7. _______ has green eyes.
   Person’s signature: ____________________________

8. _______ drives a red sports car.
   Person’s signature: ____________________________
9. ... has been up in a hot air balloon.

Person’s signature:

10. ... speaks French.

Person’s signature:

11. ... has worked for the same company for more than ten years.

Person’s signature:

12. ... has traveled the farthest to be in this class.

Person’s signature:

13. ... knows what an “ichthyologist” does.

Person’s signature:

14. ... loves their job and can tell you about it in twenty-five words or less.

Person’s signature:

15. ... plays bridge – well!

Person’s signature:

16. ... was born in a foreign country.

Person’s signature:

17. ... plays a racket sport.

Person’s signature:

18. ... has an unusual pet.

Person’s signature:

19. ... has a very unusual hobby.

Person’s signature:

20. ... has five or more children or grandchildren.

Person’s signature:

PRESCRIPTIONS FOR ADAPTABILITY

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Needs To Know:</th>
<th>D’s</th>
<th>I’s</th>
<th>S’s</th>
<th>C’s</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>What it does/ By when/ What it costs</td>
<td>What it does/ By when/ What it costs</td>
<td>How it enhances their status and visibility</td>
<td>How it will affect their personal circumstances</td>
<td>How they can justify it logically/ How it works</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Do It:</td>
<td>Rapidly</td>
<td>Dynamically</td>
<td>Friendly</td>
<td>Precisely</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Save Them:</td>
<td>Time</td>
<td>Effort</td>
<td>Conflict</td>
<td>Embarrassment</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>To Facilitate Decision Making Provide:</td>
<td>Options with supporting analysis</td>
<td>Testimonials and incentives</td>
<td>Personal service and assurances</td>
<td>Data and documentation</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Likes You To Be:</td>
<td>To the point</td>
<td>Stimulating</td>
<td>Pleasant</td>
<td>Precise</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Support Their:</td>
<td>Goals</td>
<td>Ideas</td>
<td>Feelings</td>
<td>Procedures</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Create This Environment:</td>
<td>Businesslike</td>
<td>Enthusiastic</td>
<td>Personal</td>
<td>Serious</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Maintain This Pace:</td>
<td>Fast/decisive</td>
<td>Fast/spontaneous</td>
<td>Slow/relaxed</td>
<td>Slow/systematic</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Focus On This Priority:</td>
<td>The Task/ The Results</td>
<td>The Relationship/ Interaction</td>
<td>The Relationship/ Communication</td>
<td>The Task/ The Process</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>At Play Be:</td>
<td>Competitive and aggressive</td>
<td>Spontaneous and playful</td>
<td>Casual and cooperative</td>
<td>Structured/play by the rules</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Use Time To:</td>
<td>Act efficiently</td>
<td>Enjoy the interaction</td>
<td>Develop the relationship</td>
<td>Ensure accuracy</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Write This Way:</td>
<td>Short and to the point</td>
<td>Informal and dramatic</td>
<td>Warm and friendly</td>
<td>Detailed and precise</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>On The Telephone Be:</td>
<td>Short and to the point</td>
<td>Conversational and playful</td>
<td>Warm and pleasant</td>
<td>Businesslike and precise</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

You have to learn to be flexible in your ways before becoming truly adaptable. Flexibility is an eWorkbook with exercises that will provide you with the knowledge to know when to bend and how much to bend. To purchase Flexibility, please visit my online store: http://www.alessandra.com/products/productdetails.asp?productid=61
If, as someone once said, tact is the radar of the mind, then practicing The DISC Platinum Rule can be a valuable tune-up of your antenna.

The DISC Platinum Rule—treating others the way they want to be treated by adapting to their personality style—can quickly make you a more sensitive, effective leader. Indeed, The DISC Platinum Rule can have a positive effect on almost every aspect of managing. With each of the four personality types, there’s a different way to communicate and delegate tasks, compliment and correct, and motivate and counsel.

That’s more than we can get into in this section. But I do want to explain how to generally increase your compatibility and effectiveness with all your employees.

WHERE DOES YOUR POWER COME FROM?

First, recognize that your power to influence employees springs from two sources: “position power” and “personal power.” Position power is just what it sounds like—you’re the CEO, the department head, the regional sales manager, and a certain amount of power comes from being anointed by the hierarchy.

Position power is a starting point for influencing someone. But it’s personal power that turns mere compliance into real cooperation. Personal power comes from earning it, from developing it.

Employees have gained added clout in recent decades. Court decisions combined with more enlightened theories of management have had the effect of giving more say to the rank-and-file. In fact, it’s now generally believed that a leader can’t really lead until he or she is genuinely accepted.

Thus, personal power—in essence, your skill in dealing with people—is increasingly crucial to you and your organization.

In short, if you honor your employees’ individuality, their essential difference, they’ll feel like they’re on a winning team and will work harder, better for you. But you must empower them.

You can do that by learning to listen, observe, and talk to them. And then adapting so they’ll feel important and wanted. That’s The DISC Platinum Rule put into action. Do that, and you’ll see less tension and fewer conflicts and have a more effective, motivated workforce.

THE “BEST” LEADERSHIP STYLE

Remember, the best leader isn’t someone with a particular behavioral style, or even some ideal blend of Styles. Instead, the best leader is someone who realizes what a job or task requires—and then does it! That means working well with all of the personality Styles in all sorts of situations.

In fact, as firms restructure and put new emphasis on teamwork, leaders who understand behavioral Styles will have a leg up. Sometimes they may wish to act in their natural style, using their intrinsic strengths. At other times, they may choose to adapt to others, using The DISC Platinum Rule principles. Or, when they sense a serious clash of Styles, they may wish to pick a third person to handle a certain situation.

Yet another option open to the manager is to change the work environment—say, realign a worker’s duties, alter deadlines, or revamp priorities—to allow employees to play to their strengths. Most managers today agree that you can’t mandate productivity.

A friend of ours, for example, employed a strong Conscientious Style as bookkeeper/office manager. She was terrific at that job, but when the boss had to leave the office, the Conscientious Style also had to answer the phone, and that’s where the trouble began. Complaint after complaint piled up about the bookkeeper’s brusqueness. Finally, her boss phoned in, pretending to be a customer, and was shocked at how abruptly she was treated.

“I just hate it when customers call,” the bookkeeper later conceded. “They interrupt what I’m doing.” Though a good worker, she wasn’t cut out to deal with the phone. Needless to say, the boss got somebody else to answer the phone, and everybody was happier—the boss, bookkeeper and the customers!
For any organization to run its best, it probably requires all four Styles. You can’t just say “We’re a sales organization, so we need all Influencing Styles.” Or “We’re an engineering outfit, so we just need results-oriented DOMINANTS Styles and Conscientious Styles.” You need all four types, but you need them in the right spots.

In all cases, though, you, the manager, should be very aware of your style and how it can affect others. Being conscious of the extremes of your style will allow you to become a better boss. Often, supervisors who make a study of their style in the workplace also see improved relationships at home and in social settings. “Wow!” they’ll say as they see for the first time how others view them, “that’s what my spouse has been telling me all these years.”

Whatever your primary style, you can choose to make it more palatable. Here are some ways a manager can round off some of the sharper edges of his or her personal style:

IF YOU’RE A DOMINANT STYLE (D)...

Ratchet down a notch or two! Keep in mind that others have feelings and that your hard-charging, know-it-all style can make your subordinates feel inadequate and often resentful.

Accept that mistakes will occur, and try to temper justice with mercy. You might even joke about errors you make, rather than trying to always project a super-human image.

Dominant Styles can encourage growth in others in at least two ways. First, by praising them when they do something well. And second, by giving them some authority and then staying out of their way so they can use it. Whatever you lose in control, you’re likely to gain in commitment and improved staff competency.

Try not to be quite so bossy! Ask others’ opinions and maybe—though this is radical for a Dominant Style—even plan some collaborative actions.

IF YOU’RE AN INFLUENCING STYLE (I)...

Your people depend on you not just for ideas, but for coordination too. So anything you can do to become more organized—making lists, keeping your calendar current, prioritizing goals—will pay big dividends for you and them.

Nothing’s so dispiriting as to see the boss drop the ball on important matters. So, remember: If you fail to follow-up, procrastinate on tough decisions, or make pledges you don’t keep, your employees will lose faith. Even though you don’t do those things purposely, they’ll see you as letting them down. Your charm and warmth can’t fully compensate for unreliability.

Also, come to grips with the fact that conflicts are going to occur. Try to deal with them up front, not sweep them under the rug. In addition, organize your time better and keep your socializing in balance with your tasks.

IF YOU’RE A STEADY STYLE (S)...

You’re probably a well-liked boss. Your goal should be to become a more effective, well-liked boss.

Learn to stretch a little, take on more, or different, duties and try to accomplish them more quickly. You may want to be more assertive as well as more open about your thoughts and feelings. Experiment with a little risk, a little change.

Being sensitive to your employees’ feelings is one of your greatest strengths. But you must seek a middle ground between that and being knocked off balance by the first negative comment or action that comes your way.

IF YOU’RE A CONSCIENTIOUS STYLE (C)...

Your high standards are a double-edged sword. Your employees are inspired by your quest for excellence, but often they feel frustrated because they can never quite seem to please you.

One of the best things you can do is lessen and soften your criticism, spoken or unspoken. You can seem so stern sometimes!

Ease up on your need to control. Walk around and spend more time with the troops, chatting up people at the water cooler or in the lunchroom.

Wake up to the fact that you can have high standards without requiring perfection in each instance. That will take a load off your shoulders—and off your employees, too.

Whatever your style, being adaptable can help you to build bridges to your employees and make them feel valued. By learning to best respond to their interests and concerns, their strengths and weaknesses, you can get the most from your people as well as leave them more satisfied.
MANAGING BY STYLE

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>D’s</th>
<th>I’s</th>
<th>S’s</th>
<th>C’s</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>MOTIVATING: Provide them with options and clearly describe the probabilities of success in achieving goals.</td>
<td>Offer them incentives and testimonials. Show them how they can look good in the eyes of others.</td>
<td>Show how something will benefit their relationships and strengthen their position with others.</td>
<td>Appeal to their need to be accurate and to their logical approach to things.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>COMPILMENT: Their achievements, upward mobility, and leadership potential.</td>
<td>Their appearance, creative ideas, persuasiveness, and charisma.</td>
<td>Their teamwork, the way they are regarded by other people, their relationship skills, and their ability to “get along” with others.</td>
<td>Their efficiency, thought processes, organization, persistence, and accuracy.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>COUNSELING: Stick to the facts. Draw them out by talking about the desired results. Then discuss their concerns. Focus on tasks more than feelings. Ask them how they would solve the problem.</td>
<td>Allow them plenty of opportunity to talk about things that are bothering them. Listen for facts and feelings. Many times they merely need to “get something off their chest” and talking may solve the problem.</td>
<td>Allow plenty of time to explore their feelings and understand the emotional side of the situation. They express their feelings, but indirectly. Draw them out through questioning and listening techniques. Create a non-threatening environment.</td>
<td>Describe the process that you plan to follow. Outline how that process will produce the results they seek. Ask questions to help them give you the right information. Let them show you how much they know.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>CORRECTING: Describe what results are desired. Show them the gap between actual and desired. Suggest clearly the improvement that is needed, and establish a time when they will get back to you.</td>
<td>Specify exactly what the problem happens to be and what behavior is required to eliminate the problem. Be sure you confirm in writing the agreed-upon behavior changes.</td>
<td>Reassure them that what you are seeking to correct is the behavior only. Don’t blame or judge the person; keep things focused on the behavior and its appropriateness.</td>
<td>Specify the exact behavior that is indicated, and outline how you would like to see it changed. Establish checkpoints and times.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>DELEGATING: Give them the bottom line and then get out of their way. So that they can be more efficient, give them parameters, guidelines, and deadlines.</td>
<td>Make sure you get clear agreement. Establish checkpoints so that there is not a long period of time between progress reports.</td>
<td>Make a personal appeal to their loyalty. Give them the task, state the deadlines that need to be met, and explain why it’s important to do it in that specific way.</td>
<td>Take time to answer all of their questions about structure and guidance. The more they understand the details, the more likely they will be to complete the task properly. Be sure to establish deadlines.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

If you would like to know your leadership style and get specific suggestions on how to adjust your leadership style with each of the four behavioral types, consider taking the online DISC Leadership Assessment. Visit https://leadership.DISC360.com/assessmentorder.asp
At work, how much time do you spend in meetings with at least two other people? If you’re like many of us, you’ve got planning meetings, staff meetings, project meetings, budget meetings... the list seems nearly endless. No wonder one office joker described meetings as “the practical alternative to work.”

Organizations love such groups—call them teams, committees, task forces, boards, panels, whatever. And why shouldn’t they? When they work, they can improve coordination, help employees feel more involved, and maybe even spur innovation.

But when they flop—or, more commonly, just deteriorate into mediocrity—they can drain an organization of its vitality and leave a legacy of frustration. Posturing, power struggles, and misunderstandings are so rife that you’ve probably wondered more than once if more would get done if your group never met again.

SPOTTY TRACK RECORD

One of the reasons for the spotty track record of work groups is that we’re generally naïve about them. Too often, we assume a group can automatically be a team. We act as if we can just order a good one from Purchasing, and so we opt for an off-the-rack model instead of designing a group that will best do the job.

“Round up the usual suspects,” the gendarme ordered in the famous line from the movie Casablanca. And frequently that’s what bosses seem to be thinking when they create committees or task forces.

But, in truth, making those choices is not as simple as it sounds. And whom you choose will very likely affect the outcome. The key is to analyze the objective before you recruit a group and then create a team that best matches the desired results.

One of the single biggest reasons that teams misfire is that personality differences are ignored. That can be the fault of the group’s creator, the team members themselves, or both. In either event, that’s where The DISC Platinum Rule comes in. As we’ve learned, all people are not created equal—at least, not so far as their behavior patterns are concerned.

Knowing and taking into account those differences is what can help make the best possible use of the strengths of each team member. Dominant Styles can do some things a whole lot better than an Influencing Style. A Conscientious Style might easily handle something that would drive a Steady Style nuts.

If you’re armed with The DISC Platinum Rule, you’ll be more likely to:

- Assign projects to those able to do them well,
- Sustain a cooperative climate in which each person can gain genuine respect, and
- Customize work groups to get the best results in the most efficient, satisfying manner.

HOW THE FOUR Styles ACT IN GROUPS

The four Styles each bring different perspectives to a group. And different ways of doing things too. First, let’s take a look at some of the basic characteristics of the four Styles in group situations: how they communicate, influence, involve others and make decisions.

COMMUNICATING

Each behavioral style communicates in ways so different that it’s no wonder misunderstandings occur. Dominant Styles, for example, tend to communicate with short, task-oriented comments, particularly at the start of a meeting when they like to assume control and set the meeting in motion. More than the other Styles, they’re concerned about having a clear agenda and setting the tone. They like to keep the discussion on track and on time.

Influencing Styles, by contrast, communicate more frequently and more evenly throughout a meeting. Their comments are more likely to include jokes and cover a range of topics so wide that the Influencing Styles may appear to be hopping all over the place.

Steady Styles seem generally interested in discussions throughout the whole meeting. They may ask many questions, trying to understand others’ points of view or what follow-through will be expected. They naturally act as synthesizers, go-betweens, or translators, by saying things like, “Now, if I understand what Jane and Tom meant, it’s that the next step is to....”

On the other hand, Conscientious Styles usually just quietly observe until they grasp an issue fully and have figured out in some detail what they want to say and if they’ll feel comfortable saying it. They often begin by asking a few well-chosen questions. Then, if the climate seems receptive, they’ll build up to a longer statement on what they believe is the answer.
USING INFLUENCE

The different Styles also try to sway, or influence, the group in different ways. This can become critical because every group at an early stage wrestles with the issue of who’s going to wield power.

Dominant Styles like to influence others by structuring agendas, tasks, and assignments and, if relevant, by using their formal position as leverage.

Influencing Styles are more inclined to use flattery or compliments to win over the group and get its members to feel good as a team. They’ll often use humor to defuse tension or conflict. They try to avoid a hard line that will lose them acceptance or recognition by the group.

Steady Styles, whether they’re anointed leaders or not, often take on the role of keeping the process moving along. They’ll elaborate on what others say and encourage everyone to speak. They seek to exert influence indirectly by keeping things mellow and moving.

Information and logic are the tools of the Conscientious Styles. They like to furnish information that, directly or indirectly, suggests their expertise and experience. They’re the most likely to focus on the “rightness,” or logic, of a solution, rather than spend a lot of time debating who’s personally helped or hindered by it.

INVolVING OTHERS

Working in a group, by definition, means involving others. But the four Styles vary in why and how enthusiastically they embrace others.

Generally, groups put together by Dominant Styles will be smaller and have shorter meetings than those set up by people with other Styles. Often, the Dominant Style will want the group to make some key decisions on key issues, and then delegate the rest of the work to individuals or subcommittees.

Influencing Styles are more inclined to favor a group for the group’s sake. They like others to be involved in the give-and-take. Not everyone who’s put on a committee by an Influencing Style will have a logical role there but, in the Influencing Style’s mind, that person is further seasoning for the soup, if not necessarily a main ingredient.

Conscientious Styles, too, involve others in groups to get information from a wide variety of sources. However, the Conscientious Styles are just less comfortable operating in groups. So they prefer to have much of the group work done behind the scenes by sub-groups or individuals. The Conscientious Style especially likes to be the only one who knows how all of the parts of the group’s task puzzle fit together.

DECISION-MAKING

The four Styles differ in their approach to group work because they tend to make decisions differently.

In a meeting run by a Dominant Style, decisions are more likely to be made unilaterally by the Dominant Style, or he or she will call for a vote. Dominant Styles like voting because it’s clean, quick, and decisive. It keeps debating to a minimum. Also, it’s harder to argue that a vote is unfair. And closure is clearly attained. Next topic!

A problem with voting—though Dominant Styles rarely see it as a problem—is that there are winners and losers. Influencing Styles, being more people-oriented, try to work out compromises that reduce resentment and maybe even fudge over differences. Influencing Styles want to downplay group divisions. They’re not big on voting.

Steady Styles also prefer decisions by consensus. They’d like to see the vast majority of the group be on the bus. So actions tend to be worked and reworked until almost all are in agreement.

Conscientious Styles crave “rational” decisions. Optimally, the decision won’t be made as much as it will be dictated by the facts and logic of the situation, including the key players required to make it work. Conscientious Styles like to list pros and cons of issues—sometimes even weighing the options numerically—to reach the “correct” decision. The process, they believe, will make obvious the best course of action.

Love ’em or hate ’em, work groups are here to stay. But while they can be high-performance vehicles, they can also be high-maintenance, especially in the early stages. Only a team that fully understands and savors its members’ Styles is likely to be genuinely productive.

If the teams are assigned tasks that fit their particular Styles—and if members practice The DISC Platinum Rule—the advantages of stylistic diversity can quickly outweigh the group’s liabilities. The result, despite the differences, can be a wonderful synergy.
Contrary to what passes for age-old wisdom, customers don’t buy because they’re made to understand the product or service. They buy when they feel understood. They buy when they get what they expect—and more.

But more what? That’s where the salesperson’s knowledge of the personality, or behavioral, Styles comes in. The savvy salesperson knows the Dominant Style customer, for example, wants more control. But the Influencing Style cries out for more recognition and excitement. The Steady Style wants more support, and the Conscientious Style more logic. The most successful salespeople customize their approach and follow-through for each type.

In addition, the best salespeople also reject the traditional concept of a sale. Yesterday’s selling systems won’t work today because they were designed for an adversarial environment. When your customers are your partners—and you want them as lifetime partners—you can’t sell using commando tactics.

THE SECRET OF SALES

Then one day he was gone. Recruited by corporate headquarters to teach others about effective selling. Not bad for the guy the others used to poke fun at!

The point is, the modern, collaborative salesperson helps the customer solve a problem, fill a need, or reach a goal. He or she doesn’t see the sale as just a one-time event in which persuasiveness triumphs over resistance. Rather, it’s viewed as a cooperative triumph that paves the way for a long-term partnership.

Because today’s customers are looking for such long-term relationships, your ability to collaborate with your customers will make or break your career. So the question becomes: How can you best cement that relationship, regardless of the customer’s style?

A MATCHING PROCESS

Sales is a matching process. You match the right product or service to your customer’s needs, and your selling style must also match the customer’s buying style. To do so, you must learn to adapt your style to that of your customer.

Of the four Styles, the two most outgoing ones—the Dominant Styles and Influencing Styles—are often grouped together because they’re both fast-paced and assertive. Conscientious Styles and Steady Styles, by contrast, are generally quieter, slower to decide, and less assertive.

But it’s not quite that simple. For example, Dominant Styles and Conscientious Styles also are alike in that they both tend to emphasize the need to accomplish tasks and get results. Influencing Styles and Steady Styles put a higher priority on personal relationships.

So, where does that leave you as a salesperson? Well, first try to determine which type you’re dealing with, then adjust your pace and your priority. You’ll find you can get rid of much of the tension in a relationship if you start by simply altering your speed of doing things. Then adjust, if need be, your priority—that is—whether you emphasize task or relationship.
ADJUSTING PACE AND PRIORITY

If you are a Dominant Style or Influencing Style salesperson, and you want to deal better with Steady Style or Conscientious Style customers or clients, remember that they make decisions more slowly and more privately. So, first, try to be more relaxed. Ask their opinions and find ways to acknowledge and incorporate their opinion in the dialogue. Follow their lead rather than try to take control.

Make it a point to listen more than you speak, and when you do speak, don’t interrupt, challenge, or push the process along faster than they want it to go. Be tactful about any disagreement.

If you’re a Steady Style or Conscientious Style selling to a Dominant Style or Influencing Style, you need to pick up the pace. Initiate conversations, give recommendations, and avoid beating around the bush. Maintain eye contact, use your firmest handshake, speak strongly and confidently.

As for priority, if you’re a Steady Style or Influencing Style, you naturally emphasize relationships and feelings in your sales pitches. But to deal best with Dominant Styles or Conscientious Styles, you’ll want to stress the task more. So get right to it: talk about the bottom line, and use lots of facts and logic. If possible, prepare an agenda and stick to it. Keep your meeting focused and short.

Downplay your natural ebullience; Dominant Styles and Conscientious Styles view excessive enthusiasm as “hype.” They also don’t like to be touched by strangers or have their physical space invaded. So don’t make further physical contact—beyond a handshake—until you’re sure it’s likely to be well received. Dress conservatively.

Conversely, if you’re a Dominant Style or Conscientious Style salesperson, put the relationship first when dealing with Influencing Styles or Steady Styles. Share your feelings, and let them know who you are. Show an interest in them: their job, family, and hobbies, for example. And then use that knowledge in the future to personalize your dealings with them.

Slow down and talk more. Try to speak in a friendly, informal way. Be flexible with your time, tolerating digressions, such as stories and anecdotes.

Influencing Styles and Steady Styles are more comfortable with closer proximity. So stand closer than you normally would. Try to use a few relaxed gestures, such as leaning back, smiling, or gently patting the customer on the back or shoulder.

The point is: Everybody is easy to please, if you know how. With Dominant Styles, be efficient and competent. With Influencing Styles, listen and support their ideas or dreams and flatter them. With Steady Styles, stress your warmth and sincerity, and for Conscientious Styles, take care to be especially thorough and well-prepared.

WORKING TOWARD A WIN-WIN

Treating your customers or clients the way they want to be treated, selling to them in the way they want to buy, is a strategy that can change your life. Thousands of salespeople have successfully applied these techniques. They’ve experienced dramatic increases in sales as well as greater awareness of their own personal strengths and weaknesses.

What I’ve described may be a fundamental change in the way you’ve been selling. If you start paying attention to your customers’ personality Styles, and begin viewing sales as a collaboration, not a conquest, you may, in effect, be changing jobs. You may be changing from a person who “sells” things, who sees a sale as a one-shot event, who sees your customers merely as people who can help your career...to a person who “consults” and “solves problems” based on your knowledge of your customer’s personal needs and desires.

As you work at developing a win-win solution with everyone, you’ll find there’s a side benefit. Not only will your business improve, but you’ll also find you’ll make many new friends along the way. You’ll be building lifetime loyalty to your product or service...and to yourself as well.

If these Selling By Style tips are just what you’ve been looking for, there’s more where they came from. Collaborative Selling is an eBook that teaches you how to partner with your customers and prospects instead of trying to sell without considering the other person’s needs. To purchase Collaborative Selling, please visit my online store:http://www.alessandra.com/products/productdetails.asp?productid=13

If you would like to take the online Platinum Rule Sales Assessment, visit https://sales.platinumrule.com/assessmentorder.asp
SELLING BY STYLE

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Selling to D’s</th>
<th>Selling to I’s</th>
<th>Selling to S’s</th>
<th>Selling to C’s</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>TARGET:</td>
<td>Show that you’ve done your homework on their industry or company, and on them personally.</td>
<td>Show how your product can increase their social recognition and excitement, while saving them effort.</td>
<td>Show how your product will stabilize, simplify, and support their existing practices and relationships.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>CONTACT:</td>
<td>Talk fast and in a business-like manner. Focus on results, facts, and the bottom-line.</td>
<td>Speak with friendly enthusiasm about aspirations and dreams. Let them set the conversational pace.</td>
<td>Relax and talk warmly and informally. Focus on feelings, relationships and building trust.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>EXPLORE:</td>
<td>Ask open and closed questions that focus on desired results and time constraints. Provide information about yourself while gathering information about them.</td>
<td>Ask open questions that explore their motivations, dreams, and expectations. Work business-related questions in with social questions.</td>
<td>Ask open questions that draw them out, especially around sensitive areas. Show tact and sincerity in probing about their work and relationship needs.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>COLLABORATE:</td>
<td>Emphasize efficiency, profits, and savings. Present quick, concise analysis of their needs and your solutions.</td>
<td>Emphasize uniqueness, innovativeness, excitement, visibility, and saving effort. Style of presentation is as important as substance.</td>
<td>Emphasize security, harmony, steadiness, and company benefits. Involve them by asking for feedback.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>CONFIRM:</td>
<td>Provide options with cost benefit summary of each. Acknowledge that the final decision is theirs.</td>
<td>Act assumptive and quick. Use testimonials and incentives.</td>
<td>Make a mutual action plan. Provide personal guidance, direction, and assurance.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>ASSURE:</td>
<td>Provide ongoing reminders of your track record. Show them that you stand behind your product to deliver their results.</td>
<td>Save them effort and complications while making them look good. Check for proper product usage.</td>
<td>Practice consistent and predictable follow-up. Continue building your business relationship with personal attention and assurance.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
PROVIDING SERVICE WITH STYLE

Everywhere you turn today, you hear about the importance of customer satisfaction. You might think that service is getting better with each passing moment. Surveys, though, suggest otherwise. One customer in four is thinking about leaving the average business at any given time because of dissatisfaction.

What’s wrong? Too many companies and employees view customer support as something that happens once and is then over. True service doesn’t just focus on a one-time event, but on building a sustained, positive relationship.

Firms and people with a positive attitude toward service know that each contact is an opportunity that may never come again. Such encounters typically produce either a Moment of Magic: Positive experiences that make customers glad they do business there, or a Moment of Misery: negative experiences that irritate, frustrate, or annoy.

EXCEEDING EXPECTATIONS
The key to creating a “Moment of Magic” is exceeding a customer’s expectations. But what works for one person may not work for another. So we’re going to look at that process and how we can use knowledge of the behavioral Styles to create Moments of Magic.

DEALING WITH DOMINANT STYLES
Dominant Styles may appear uncooperative, trying to dictate terms and conditions. But ask yourself: what do they need? You can help defuse them by providing:
• Results, or at least tangible signs of progress;
• A fast pace;
• Evidence that they have control of the situation;
• A belief that time is being saved.

The last thing you should do is assert your authority and argue with the Dominant Style. They’re not going to be listening, and they’ll probably out-assert you. “Nobody ever won an argument with a customer” is an axiom of service. And that’s doubly true with Dominant Styles.

DEALING WITH INFLUENCING STYLES
Influencing Styles with a complaint may seem overeager and impulsive. They may also come across as manipulative. Under stress, Influencing Style’s primary response may be to disregard the facts and anything you say. But you can address their needs by giving them:
• Personal attention;
• Affirmation of their position;
• Lots of verbal give-and-take;
• Assurance that effort is being saved.

You’d be better off to give Influencing Styles a quick-paced, spirited explanation that shows you aren’t just brushing them off.

DEALING WITH STEADY STYLES
Steady Styles may appear submissive, hesitant, wishy-washy, or even apologetic. You may need to draw them out. They just wish this whole problem would go away. Steady Styles will be made most comfortable if you:
• Make them feel they’re personally “okay”;
• Promise that the crisis will soon ebb;
• Guarantee the process will be relaxed and pleasant;
• Show you’re committed to working with them to iron out the problem and save the relationship.

Remember, Steady Styles get just as upset as Dominant Styles; they just express it in a much more low-key way. And they’ll quietly go elsewhere if their needs aren’t met.

DEALING WITH CONSCIENTIOUS STYLES
Conscientious Styles tend to recite the chronology of events and the litany of errors they’ve had to endure. They’ll provide copious data and documentation. Here’s how you can lessen tension with a complaining Conscientious Style:
• Suggest that they’re right;
• Explain the process and details;
• Show appreciation for their accuracy;
• Help them “save face”.

You may see them as “compulsives” who are more hung up on the process and on showing they’re right than getting the problem resolved. But if you want to retain their loyalty, you’ll deal with them precisely and systematically, emphasizing your firm’s interest in seeing justice done.

Be customer-oriented! When you’re policy-oriented, you give off an attitude of not caring about what your customers want. When you focus on the customer and his or her needs, you’ll be utilizing Customer Driven Service.
ONE: My predominant behavioral style is: ________________________________

TWO: Two people with whom I currently have a professional or social relationship are:

Person A: __________________________________________________________
Person B: __________________________________________________________

THREE: Based on my observations of each person’s openness and directness, I would identify their behavioral Styles as (Dominant Style, Influencing Style, Steady Style or Conscientious Style):

Person A’s Style: _____________________________________________________
Person B’s Style: _____________________________________________________

FOUR: My sources of stress in my relationship with each person are:

Person A: __________________________________________________________
Person B: __________________________________________________________

FIVE: I would like to see my relationship with these two individuals improve in these specific ways:

Person A: __________________________________________________________
Benefits to be gained: ________________________________________________
Person B: __________________________________________________________
Benefits to be gained: ________________________________________________

SIX: These adjustments to my own behavioral style will demonstrate behavioral adaptability:

With Person A: _______________________________________________________
With Person B: _______________________________________________________

SEVEN: The strategy that I will use as a foundation for building my relationship with each person will be:

Person A: __________________________________________________________
Person B: __________________________________________________________
COMPARISON WITH OTHER “STYLES” CONCEPTS

The “four Styles” model is by no means a new concept. Starting with Hippocrates (who lived 400 years B.C.) sociologists, philosophers and researchers have noticed humans falling into four predictable behavioral patterns. Seeing as many people have been exposed to at least one other model, we are including below a chart to help you cross-reference our Styles terminology with many of the more popular models.

Comparison of the Styles

THE CONSCIENTIOUS STYLE (C’s)
- Thinker (Alessandra, O’Connor, Cathcart, Zimmerman)
- Analytical (Merrill, Wilson, Alessandra, Hunsaker)
- Intuitor (Jung)
- Comprehender (De Ville)
- Melancholy (Galen, Hippocrates)
- Conserving-Holding (Atkins)
- Q2 Submissive-Hostile (Lefton)

THE DOMINANT STYLE (D’s)
- Director (Alessandra, O’Connor, Cathcart, Zimmerman)
- Driver (Merrill, Wilson, Alessandra, Hunsaker)
- Sensor (Jung)
- Controller (De Ville)
- Choleric (Galen, Hippocrates)
- Controlling-Taking (Atkins)
- Q1 Dominant-Hostile (Lefton)

THE STEADY STYLE (S’s)
- Relater (Alessandra, O’Connor, Cathcart, Zimmerman)
- Amiable (Merrill, Wilson, Alessandra, Hunsaker)
- Thinker (Jung) *
- Supporter (De Ville)
- Phlegmatic (Galen, Hippocrates)
- Supporting-Giving (Atkins)
- Q3 Submissive-Warm (Lefton)

THE INFLUENCING STYLE (I’s)
- Socializer (Alessandra, O’Connor, Cathcart, Zimmerman)
- Expressive (Merrill, Wilson, Alessandra, Hunsaker)
- Feeler (Jung)
- Entertainer (De Ville)
- Sanguine (Galen, Hippocrates)
- Adapting-Dealing (Atkins)
- Q4 Dominant-Warm (Lefton)

* “THINKER”: While this was the title given by Carl Jung in his classical work Psychological Types, he meant something quite different by it than contemporary use. Jung defined this drive in people as one that involved “working with existing data” in a manner that allowed this “evidence” to be the basis for explaining the reality of their life experiences by naming and/or labeling facts, including what one is “feeling” (in the “introverted” types), and/or theories. This function, then, is directed essentially by an external system of knowledge or logic rather than one’s own inner, or more intuitional state meant by the term “THINKER” (The “C” pattern) in this program.
ANSWER KEY

A DAY AT THE OFFICE

| | | | |
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th></th>
<th></th>
<th></th>
<th></th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>P</td>
<td>CW</td>
<td>F</td>
<td>P</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>C</td>
<td>P</td>
<td>C</td>
<td>F</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>CW</td>
<td>C</td>
<td>P</td>
<td>CW</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

1. CW
2. C
3. F
4. P
5. CW
6. P
7. C
8. C

BOARDROOM VIGNETTE

| | | | |
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th></th>
<th></th>
<th></th>
<th></th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>TOM - DOMINANT</td>
<td>JUDY - INFLUENCING</td>
<td>JOHN - CONSCIENTIOUS</td>
<td>MARY - DOMINANT</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>LIZ - STEADY</td>
<td>PAUL - INFLUENCING</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

* P = The Prospect
* C = The Customer
* CW = The Co-Worker
* F = The Friend

---

59
Alessandra, Tony, Ph.D., Michael J. O’Connor, Ph.D., and Janice Van Dyke, Ph.D. 2006. People Smart in Business. Platinum Rule Press.

Alessandra, Tony, Ph.D., Michael J. O’Connor, Ph.D., and Janice Van Dyke, Ph.D. 2006. People Smart with Family, Friends & Significant Others. Platinum Rule Press.

Galen, Claudius, Second Century A.D. Philosopher & Physician, as referenced by Carl Jung in Psychological Times.

Kostis, Peter. 1983. “Analytical...Driver...Amiable...Expressive...Which One is the Real YOU?” Golf Digest (September): 53-57.

Tony Alessandra, PhD, CSP, CPAE
Building Customers, Relationships, and the Bottom Line

Dr. Tony Alessandra has a street-wise, college-smart perspective on business, having been raised in the housing projects of NYC to eventually realizing success as a graduate professor of marketing, entrepreneur, business author, and hall-of-fame keynote speaker. He earned a BBA from the Univ. of Notre Dame, an MBA from the Univ. of Connecticut and his PhD in marketing from Georgia State University.

In addition to being president of Assessment Business Center, a company that offers online 360º assessments, Tony is also a founding partner in The Cyrano Group and Platinum Rule Group—companies which have successfully combined cutting-edge technology and proven psychology to give salespeople the ability to build and maintain positive relationships with hundreds of clients and prospects.

Dr. Alessandra is a prolific author with 18 books translated into 49 foreign language editions, including the newly revised, best selling The NEW Art of Managing People (Free Press/Simon & Schuster, 2008); Charisma (Warner Books, 1998); The Platinum Rule® (Warner Books, 1996); Collaborative Selling (John Wiley & Sons, 1993); and Communicating at Work (Fireside/Simon & Schuster, 1993). He is featured in over 50 audio/video programs and films, including Relationship Strategies (American Media); The Dynamics of Effective Listening (Nightingale-Conant); and Non-Manipulative Selling (Walt Disney). He is also the originator of the internationally-recognized behavioral style assessment tool—The Platinum Rule®.

Recognized by Meetings & Conventions Magazine as “one of America’s most electrifying speakers,” Dr. Alessandra was inducted into the Speakers Hall of Fame in 1985 and is a member of the Speakers Roundtable, a group of 20 of the world’s top professional speakers. Tony’s polished style, powerful message, and proven ability as a consummate business strategist consistently earn rave reviews and loyal clients.

Contact information for Dr. Tony Alessandra:

- Dr. Tony’s Products: http://www.alessandra.com/products/index.asp
- Keynote Speeches: Holli Catchpole
  Phone: 1-760-603-8110
  Email: Holli@SpeakersOffice.com
- Corporate Training: Scott Zimmerman
  Phone: 1-330-848-0444 x2
  Email: Scott@PlatinumRule.com
- Cyrano CRM System: Scott Zimmerman
  Phone: 1-330-848-0444 x2
  Email: Scott@PlatinumRule.com
There’s a vast difference between knowledge and practice. While we are pleased that you’ve just been exposed to the concept of adaptability, we hope that you seriously consider the steps you must take to master the practice of adaptability.

In 2005, Dr. Tony Alessandra founded Platinum Rule Group LLC (PRG) with the intention of helping individuals, companies, corporations and organizations improve every relationship. Tony recruited and mentored Scott Zimmerman. In 2006, Scott was named Managing Partner of the firm. Today, they remain partners in the business.

Platinum Rule Group offers customized workshops, training programs, keynotes, breakout sessions, assessments, products and even a proprietary CRM (Customer Retention Management) System (Cyrano CRM) to help you learn how to treat everyone the way they want to be treated.

Scott Zimmerman is best known for creating sales support systems that automate key follow-ups and touch points that help salespeople stay in meaningful contact with hundreds of prospects, customers and referral partners. In 2001, “one-to-one marketing” leapt from the pages of books into reality when Zimmerman revealed the Cyrano CRM Marketing System. After four years of researching ways to match marketing messages to every nuance of personal preferences and psychographics, Zimmerman discovered Alessandra’s work.

The marriage of an adaptive sales process and customized, automated communications has proven to give salespeople and rainmakers the ability to immediately connect with—and stay connected to—everyone they meet.

For details related to sales growth, business development systems, marketing consulting and/or Cyrano CRM Marketing System, contact Scott: 1-330-848-0444 x2 or Scott@PlatinumRule.com

Assessments

Dr. Alessandra is the Founder and President of AssessmentBusinessCenter.com (ABC), a full-service, online resource for comprehensive assessment systems to corporate human resource clients, business and marketing consultants, training and coaching professionals and academics.

With a wide range of useful and enlightening subjects in ready-to-use and custom designed formats, ABC provides assessments on the topics of emotional intelligence, leadership, effective communications, sales & customer satisfaction, and personality Styles. Employers who use ABC assessments recognize that they are powerful resources with easily accessible data. When used as part of a training and/or development program, they enhance employees’ skills.

For details regarding online assessments, please contact Dr. Tony Alessandra: 1-858-598-3455 or email: TA@Alessandra.com
Dr. Tony Alessandra helps companies out-market, out-sell and out-service the competition with his street-wise, college-smart perspective on business. He was born and raised in New York City and earned his PhD in Marketing in 1976.

Dr. Alessandra is founder and president of AssessmentBusinessCenter.com. He is also a founding partner in The Cyrano Group and Platinum Rule Group—companies which have successfully combined cutting-edge technology and proven psychology to give salespeople the ability to build and maintain positive relationships with hundreds of clients and prospects.

A prolific author with 21 books translated into 49 foreign language editions and over 100 audio/video programs and films, he was recognized by Meetings & Conventions Magazine as “One of America’s most electrifying speakers” and inducted into the Speakers Hall of Fame in 1985.

Here is what some other experts say about The Platinum Rule...

“Dr. Tony Alessandra’s work brilliantly provides effective insights for improving communication in any and all situations.”
John Gray, Ph.D., Author, Men Are From Mars, Women Are From Venus

“A blueprint for getting everything you want.”
Mark Victor Hansen, Co-author, Chicken Soup for the Soul Series

“(This) is the priceless key to unlocking the door to empowerment, productivity and all business and personal relationships. It is simply the most important leadership concept I have learned in all of my life!”
Denis Waitley, Author, Empires of the Mind and The Psychology of Winning